BOY STARVING IN THE STREET

VANCOUVER (CP) — An eight-year-old boy, half-starved and begging for money but ignored by most passersby, was in satisfactory condition in hospital Tuesday.

John Lynn, spokesman for the Vancouver resources board which is responsible for children's welfare in the city, said Tuesday that formal application will be made Thursday for custody of the boy.

The boy, without shoes and socks, his belly bloated from the effects of starvation, was found in Kitsilano Saturday morning by John Christian and Stephanie Tofield who saw the boy begging from passersby.

Christian said they became concerned because "he was very, very sick and people were just passing. The only tint on his cheeks were greenish bruises on each temple," he said. "The boy was suffering exposure after having spent some nights alone, outside, sleeping under trees.

"He acted just like he was dying," said Christian.

They brought the boy a pint of milk "which he just gulped down . . . he was confused and kind of collapsed."

They had him taken to hospital and called police. Since then, said Tofield, they had visited the boy in hospital, but on Monday were told that such visits were no longer permitted.

Lynn said the boy was "very definitely suffering from lack of food, very visibly showing that he also has tooth problems."

"This is one of the most dramatic cases of child abuse that we have dealt with in the last half-year," he said.

Lynn said social workers have contacted the mother and have found that there are no other children at risk. He said resource board officials were not contemplating laying criminal charges, a move not within their terms of reference.

A police spokesman said the matter is being left to welfare officials. Lynn said the boy has been placed under the Protection of Children Act and will be "a considerable time in hospital."

GAS CUT LAY-OFFS MOUNT

Emergency in Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Emergency resources were alerted today to care for people left without heat and cooking facilities when the Vancouver Island Gas Co. ran out of fuel Tuesday afternoon.

Mayor Frank Ney said today more than 1,000 persons employed in restaurants, hotels and other businesses relying on gas had been laid off because of a dispute that has so far cut domestic gas of 1,500 users

Ney said about 500 elderly persons rely on gas. It there is a sudden drop in temperature he expected all elderly persons in difficulty would be evacuated.

Ald. James Moffatt, in charge of council's emergency plan, said a large mobile kitchen was ready to supply meals to several hundred people an hour and Provincial Emergency Program (PEP) officials assured him that another kitchen van is available from Powell River if necessary.

Moffatt said PEP had authorized putting the Nanaimo group on standby, and Ney said he and the council had authority to send it into action at provincial government expense.

Ney said Vancouver Island Gas had closed because its supply of gas had been exhausted. The other companies still going but with short supplies are: Canadian Propane Gas and Oil, CIGAS products, Northwest Propane and Coastal Propane.

Nanaimo council has asked for government intervention, but TLR president Carl Anshelm said the companies do not seek it.

Agriculture Minister David Stupich said both sides in the labor-management impasse must agree to third party intervention before the government can act.

Ney meanwhile declared only the government can act to restore gas supplies in the face of the stalemate involving five propane gas suppliers and three Teamsters Union locals.

POUND SINKS TO NEW LOW

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar continued to climb today on Europe's money markets. The British pound fell to a new low while gold made a modest rally.

The pound dropped to $2.03, while across the English Channel the dollar was selling for 2.6747 West German marks, 2.7357 Swiss francs and 4.5862 French francs.

OLD BRIC-A-BRAC, including ancient curly park benches and lamp standards, may soon be put on the block by the city. Belinda Backwell takes stock. Ald. Sam Bawlf suggested Tuesday the ancient pieces could be sold at a mammoth garage auction, or sale, the proceeds to be used for decorative touches to the Government Street mall and other areas. Gas Hike Of 52% Nov. 1

Times News Serives

Canadian natural gas prices are due to rise by 52 per cent on Nov. 1 as a result of an Ottawa-Alberta agreement announced today in Edmonton.

Energy Ministers Donald Macdonald of Ottawa and Don Getty of Alberta reaffirmed in a three-hour session that the wholesale price in Toronto will increase at that date to $1.25 from 82 cents a thousand cubic feet.

Macdonald said the action of the two governments in effect overrules a provincial arbitation board award that would have increased the Toronto wholesale price to $1.52 a thousand cubic feet, an increase of 85 per cent.

The federal Petroleum Administration Act, giving Ottawa power to set interprovincial prices, will be used with Alberta's approval to put the new price in effect nationally.

Getty said new provincial natural gas marketing legislation will be introduced in November to allow the province to hold down its domestic prices as well.

"It means the price proposed by the arbitation board ing in the provincial legisla- will not go into effect Nov. 1," Getty said following a meet- ture buildings.

Macdonald said going into the meeting the federal government would have been forced to take "unilateral action" under the price-fixing legislation if agreement with the province was not possible.

The two governments reached an understanding in June on the $1.25 price for gas delivered in Toronto, a 52-per-cent increase that would add $65 to the average homeowners annual fuel bill of $264.

'Sell-Out' Claimed In Wood Talks Wake

Charges of "selling out" and counter charges of "irresponsibility" flew between union leaders Tuesday following the breakdown in forest industry talks.

The last vestige of a unified union front was wiped away as pulp unions withdrew from mediation efforts and the International Woodworkers of America agreed to struggle on in attempts to win a settlement.

Tense and tired after seven straight days of talks under the eye of provincially-appointed mediators, the union leaders broke their "no comment" pacts and criticized each other's positions.

Nanaimo Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada leader Bruce Tunstall, asked if the pulp union caucuses had discussed the IWA bargaining position, retorted: "We know their position. They'll sell out for anything they can get."

Later in the day, after pulp union negotiators had already left their hotel rooms to head for home, IWA leader Jack Munro charged they were irresponsible in walking out of the talks "when we've got 40,000 people out of work."

Tunstall said the PPWC and the other pulp union, the Canadian Paperworkers Union, had come closer together in their bargaining positions in the last few days.

He said the decision to walk out of the talks was unanimous.

CPU president Art Gruntman said the pulp workers were withdrawing from the talks "in order to give the IWA and the employers an opportunity to reach an agreement."

PPWC president Reg Ginn said the pulp workers had already modified their contract demands "right out of the ballpark" and Gruntman added that the employers "never really did bargain this year."

Postal Workers Lose Lawsuit

OTTAWA (CP) — A shoe manufacturing company located in Sherbrooke, Que., has been awarded $1,000 in damages to be paid by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers in a provincial court decision.

The award arises out of the 16-day illegal strike held by postal workers in April, 1974.

A spokesman for the national headquarters of the union said Tuesday that the union will have to look at the decision, the first won by businesses, to decide whether to appeal.

The firm is Santana Inc., a firm which sells shoes for women directly to retail stores, chain stores and to distributors located across the country.

The company uses postal services to send order requests to its customers, who then return the forms in the mail.

Santana said it had to borrow money from banks in order to continue operations and was forced to use more costly private courier, telephone and telegram services to stay in business.

In its submission to the Sherbrooke court, the company noted that its business volume dropped from $184,765 in March to $85,520 in April, the month of the national walkout. Its income rose to $162,918 in May.

The losses occurred directly because of the illegal action of the union, the company maintained.

BOAT MISHAP KILLS PAIR

A Vancouver man is in satisfactory condition but two of his companions are dead after a boating mishap on the mainland this morning.

In satisfactory condition at Vancouver General Hospital is Randy T. Buhr, 22. Dead are R. A. Klyne, 45, and his 16-year-old son Calvin Alexander.

The trio went fishing in a 14-foot aluminum boat Tuesday and were reported missing Tuesday evening.

Police Reject Arbitration

Victoria police union president Pat Braiden has ruled out arbitration recommended today by the Victoria Police Board to resolve the differences between the city and its policemen.

Instead, he indicated that the situation might be forced through some form of "job action" including a strike, work-to-rule, study sessions or speed-up (ticketing the public).

"Pollen's playing with the lives of the public and if that's the sort of game he wants to play, we'll play it," Braiden said after the board, chaired by Mayor Peter Pollen, voted to ask city council to make the arbitration bid to avoid confrontation between the union and the city.

"There's no doubt we'll do it. I haven't met one man here who feels differently," said Braiden.

Pollen said rather than the regular form of arbitration under the Labor Code he would like to see some form of independent tribunal which would consider all aspects of the settlement and its financial impact on the community.

The normal type of arbitrator appointed he claimed, is so biased in favor of unions that the exercise 'proves "rather useless" as far as municipal employers are concerned.

Today's threat of a strike or other form of disruptive action by city policemen will likely show in the outcome of a membership meeting scheduled for Thursday night.

Braiden rejected a Tuesday suggestion by city council that a 22.3 per cent increase in all categories form the basis for fresh negotiations between the police board and the union. He said that would still leave sergeants and lower ranks from three to 12 per cent behind their Saanich counterparts, which was "totally unacceptable.

"The least we will accept is total parity with Saanich . . . and the offer must be made by Friday morning," he said.

If a strike vote is taken at Thursday's meeting and the 72-hour strike notice is posted immediately, Victoria could have a police strike on its hands as early as Sunday midnight.

POLLEN 'FACTS' WRONG

Victoria policemen do not earn more than their counterparts in New York and Detroit as Mayor Peter Pollen claimed Tuesday, the Times learned today.

"We're already paying them (Victoria policemen) more than Detroit and New York," Pollen had said, representing this "fact" as one of the council's justifications in rejecting the police board wage offer of 22.3 per cent, which would have meant Victoria-Saanich police parity.

But the Times has learned that New York and Detroit policemen are earning more per year than Victoria police are earning at the moment or would earn if council gave them parity with Saanich.

First-class constables (three or more years of service) in Victoria are presently receiving $13,248 a year.

In New York, police are receiving $16,470 per year, a New York police spokesman said. This is $3,222 more than Victoria.

Officer Mike Bossuyt of Detroit police said policemen with three years of service there are earning $16,200 — $2,952 more than Victoria police.

A Victoria policeman who has served on the force for 20 years earns $13,488. New York policemen with the same number of years service earn $16,870 and Detroit policemen $17,292 plus.

B.C.'s Sasquatch Makes It Big in U.S. Atlas

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — British Columbia's legendary sasquatch is featured in an atlas recently published by the United States government.

The sasquatch is on Page 53 of the "Washington Environmental Atlas," a $48 publication of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

According to the text, illustrated with a drawing of a tall, hairy, ape-like creature, the FBI has investigated the monster, which has been sighted in Oregon, California, the Soviet Union and South America as well as B.C.

"Alleged sasquatch hair samples inspected by FBI laboratories resulted in the conclusion that no such hair exists on any human or presently-known animal for which such data are available," the Washington state atlas says.

But the FBI itself cannot recall such an investigation, says an official of the corp of engineers environmental resources division in Seattle, which supervised the book's preparation.

"The FBI called us today. 'Did we really do that?' " the official.

No trace has been found of such a lab report, the official added.

The reference was written by a Bob Maury, who has since left the corps' Seattle office. Attempts to locate him to check it out have been unsuccessful, the official said.

"It is part of the lore of the Pacific northwest which the people who worked on the atlas felt should be in," the official said of the sasquatch.

"A lot of conservationists felt some reference should be included. This is not a reflection of the corps' feeling, necessarily." The atlas notes that the sasquatch has been "sighted" 89 times in B.C. — more than anywhere else.

But California has the most reports of "sasquatch tracks" at 82, with B.C. second at 38.

"The very existence of sasquatch, or big foot as it is sometimes known, is hotly disputed," the atlas says. "Some profess to be open-minded about the matter, although stating that not one piece of evidence will withstand serious scientific scrutiny.

Others, because of a particular incident or totality of reports over the years, are convinced that sasquatch is a reality."

The book describes a composite picture, based on reports, of "an ape-like creature, standing between eight and 12 feet tall, weighing in excess of 1,000 pounds, and taking strides of up to six feet."

A map shows the location of U.S. sightings and tracks and a table compiles a total of 497 sasquatch reports.

"If sasquatch is purely legendary, the legehd is likely to be a long time in dying," says the atlas. "On the other hand, if sasquatch does exist, then with the sasquatch hunts being mounted, and the increasing human population, it seems likely that some hard evidence may soon be in hand."

The atlas "which otherwise contains many scientific facts," an official said, can be purchased at U.S. government printing office bookstores.

The Seattle bookstore has had to order more copies after selling its first 100 atlases.

The atlas took three years to prepare and is described as being a comprehensive environmental inventory of Washingto state.

CIA OPENED NIXON MAIL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA regularly opened and read the mail of former president Richard Nixon and other prominent Americans including Senator Edward Kennedy as part of its 20-year mail surveillance program, the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee said today.

A spokesman for chairman Frank Church Dem. Idaho, said that Nixon's mail had been opened both before and while he was president. The spokesman added that the CIA opened and read the mail of other presidents as well.

In addition to Nixon and Kennedy, Church said the mail of Senator Hubert Humphrey, Representative Bella Abzug, the late civil rights leader Martin Luther King and his wife, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns, the Ford Foundation, Harvard University and the Rockefeller Foundation also was opened.

meeting during the seven days of mediation, the IWA and the industry agreed to return to Victoria Thursday afternoon for a bargaining session.

Although the chances for an IWA settlement are better, in comparison, to those of a pulp settlement, the industry and the union are still far apart in their bargaining positions.

A further rift between the IWA and the pulp unions will come if the IWA reaches a settlement and the pulp workers continue their picket lines around IWA certified operations, an action which Gruntman said would be taken.

Gruntman and Ginn both stressed that pulp talks had merely "recessed" and said they were willing to meet again as early as next week if there was any chance for a settlement, but Labor Minister Bill King said it was his impression that the talks had broken down.

"It is regrettable that this is their decision," said King. "It's a sad commentary on collective bargaining when two parties made no progress in seven days of discussions."

The IWA took a definite second place to the pulp unions during the seven days, acting mainly as an onlooker.

The pulp unions Monday presented modified contract demands to industry negotiators, but the major proposals were rejected.

Ginn said the IWA "should get their affairs settled, then we'll go about ours."

Both pulp leaders said the market conditions for lumber and pulp vary and that bargaining positions of the unions vary accordingly.

"Prices of products manufactured by the IWA are soft, but over two years newsprint has gone up 50 per cent and prices are holding firm," Gruntman said.

Management negotiators have gone back to Vancouver today for meetings and will return to Victoria for a bargaining session with the IWA late Thursday, still under the direction of provincial mediators Gus Leonidas and Fred Geddes.

Picket Violence In Thunder Bay

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Two city men were taken to hospital and nine others received superficial wounds Tuesday when violence erupted on a picket line outside the Great Lakes Paper Co.

James McKewan, 46, is listed in fairly stable condition following emergency surgery for head injuries suffered in a clash between tradesmen and striking members of the Canadian Paperworkers Union.

Austin McCooeye, 60, is also listed in fairly stable condition after suffering neck injuries.

The violence broke out when about 100 tradesmen attempted to cross picket lines set up by roughly 400 striking workers.

Police Chief Onni Harty told the strikers they would be arrested if they refused to allow the tradesmen through the picket lines.

The violence broke out when striking workers responded to chief Harty's warning by saying that if one went to jail, they would all go.

HAZARD EXTREME

B.C. Forest Service stepped up its forest patrols on southern Vancouver Island as fire hazards today rose from high to extreme.

"Only clouds and cooler days can reduce the hazard," said BCFS spokesman. "A wind would bring things to an explosive state in the woods."

Elsewhere in the province, there are 17 new fires and 64 burning, he said.

To date, 2504 fires have occurred compared to 2026 for the corresponding period last year. Estimate fire suppression cost to date are $7,298,644 compared to $4,832,542 for the same period in 1974.

The extremely hazardous conditions, has brought to a halt slash buring in most areas of Vancouver Forest fire district which takes in Vancouver Island.

Trudeau Boycotts Plowing Contest

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau boycotted the 1975 international plowing championships near Oshawa at the last minute Tuesday after learning that two white Rhodesians were competitors.

The prime minister was on his way to the international match when he was told about the Rhodesians even though officials in his office and immigration officials were aware at least the day before that they would be there.

A spokesman for the prime minister's office said that Trudeau made his decision on the grounds that Canada doesn't recognize Rhodesia and is a signator of the United Nations resolution condemning the white supremacist policy of the Rhodesian government headed by Prime Minister Ian Smith.

Rick Waller, press supervisor with the Ontario ministry of food and agriculture, said officials at the match were told that Trudeau would not visit the competition only 15 minutes before the prime minister was scheduled to arrive.

"This is why we like to keep politicians away from plowing," said Alfred Hall, general secretary of the World Ploughing Organization.

Norman Cafik, Liberal member of Parliament for Ontario riding, told the waiting crowd of about 10,000 that Trudeau found himself unable to attend for diplomatic reasons.

Trudeau, who was to have been the main speaker at the annual competition arrived at Toronto Internationational Airport before he learned Rhodesians would compete in the meet.

Bunn Runs Again

Peter Bunn, 14-year veteran of Greater Victoria school board, will run again in November for a seat on the board.

Bunn is vice-president of the B.C. School Trustees Association. He is expected to run for president next spring.

Trustees Daphne Temple and Dr. Hal Knight have not decided whether to run. Phil Perry has announced he will not seek another term.

Mental Tests For Moore

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sara Moore, ordered to undergo sanity tests after firing a pistol at President Ford, has only a "cloudy" memory of the assassination attempt, says her lawyer, public defender James Hewitt.

U.S. Magistrate Owen Woodruff directed Tuesday that the divorced mother of one be taken to San Diego on Friday and given psychiatric tests at the Metropolitan Correctional Centre there.

He said results would be reported to him by Nov. 18.

Meanwhile, a gun collector who sold Moore, a former WAC, the .38-calibre pistol used in the shooting Monday, said Tuesday night the woman seemed to be accomplished in the use of firearms.

Mark Fernwood of Danville, Calif., also said Mrs. Moore had not seemed to him "the kind of person you would expect to try to assassinate a president.

She was bright, cheerful and even gave me tips on how to decorate my home. She wasn't flaky at all."

Arrested immediately after she fired at Ford as he emerged from a downtown hotel, Mrs. Moore, 45, is being held in lieu of $500,000 bail on a federal charge of trying to assassinate the president.

If convicted, she faces a possible life sentence.

Nanaimo Gas Emergency

step in, otherwise the people will become militant," said Ney, who is also a director of Vancouver Island Gas.

He said the company directors "would be glad to go for arbitration, but this was turned down by the union."

Noting that Stupich asked Tuesday why the directors had not intervened, Ney said the companies are represented by Transport Labor Relations in their bargaining with the union.

Today Stupich said he had discussed the matter with Labor Minister Bill King who said if third party intervention was requested by the company, then he would appoint an industrial inquiry commissioner. The only other alternative would be to recall the legislature and have it order an end to the dispute.

Stupich said he felt the only situation where a real emergency may exist is at a Nanaimo rest home with elderly patients.

Teamster Local 351 business agent Peter Moslinger said it appeared the companies are looking for government action by allowing supplies to run out. However Ney said this had occurred because of a rail embargo on gas due to the dispute.

Gas comes under control of the government-appointed transport commission, so whatever settlement is made, "the public wins or loses, not the companies," Ney said.

OPEC READIES BOOST

But no formal agreement was reached at that time and unless some action was taken, the arbitration board ruling announced in May would have gone into effect Nov. 1, raising the Toronto price to $1.52, tacking an extra $105 on natural gas bills.

In a related development, the British Columbia energy commission Tuesday approved an interim increase of approximately 3.5 per cent in the rates of Pacific Northern Gas Ltd.

Company officials said the interim rates, effective Oct. 1, will give the company additional revenue of $395,000 a year, which should provide the company a return of 9.5 per cent on its approved rate base as previously authorized by the commission.

Meanwhile, the world's leading oil producers agreed today to raise petroleum prices Oct. 1. Most of them said it would be a "modest" increase that would keep world inflation from soaring out of control.

The exact size of the increase was being worked out at a special meeting of oil ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that opened this morning in Vienna and is expected to end Thursday night.

An Iranian source spoke of a 7 to 10 per cent increase in the current $10.46 a barrel for Saudi Arabian crude, the benchmark price in the OPEC pricing system.

Each percentage of increase would add about $1 billion to the world's oil bill, which already has gone up 500 per cent in the past five years.

A 10 per cent increase in oil prices, which some OPEC officials regard as a likely compromise, would raise the price per barrel by $1.05 to a total $11.51. A 7 per cent hike would boost prices 73 cents to a total $11.19.

Apple Crop 'Disaster'

VANCOUVER (CP) — An industry spokesman said Tuesday that the Okanagan Valley's biggest apple crop in more than a decade faces the risk of a multi-million-dollar loss because of the continued strike-lockout closure of most Greater Vancouver supermarkets.

A British Columbia Tree Fruits Ltd. spokesman said that nearly a fifth of the crop normally is sold in the Vancouver area. This year markets for much of that segment must be found elsewhere.

Apple production could run as high as 280 million pounds, worth some $40 million, a 37-per-cent increase over last year, the spokesman said.

"We are doing all we can to sell elsewhere in Canada and to increase exports, but we're facing stiff competition from big apple crops in Washington State and on the east coast," said agency official Art Robinson.

"Although we have three retail outlets in the Vancouver area, we can't expect normal sales volume.

"We recently expanded our controlled-atmosphere storage facilities, yet apples can be stored only for a certain period of time, depending on variety."

Vegetable growers also are feeling the pinch of the supermarket closure, said Dick Stocks of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture.

"It's hard to estimate the losses," he said. "Up until the middle of last week the decline in marketing was quite slow, and most crops can go into storage for some time.

"But layoffs of workers have been forced in the industry, and the small stores and independent vegetable stands can't handle the normal volume."

ROUTE SET FOR TUBE

VANCOUVER (CP) — City and provincial government officials found out Tuesday that they are in virtual agreement on the essential need and route for the first leg of a downtown subway.

Tom Parkinson of the provincial transit bureau expressed the bureau's support for a 2,000-foot subway from the Granville Waterfront transit station to near the east end of False Creek.

The $20 million subway has not yet been presented to the cabinet formally for financial aid.

Bruce

Hallucinations in Solitary . . .

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Convict Andy Bruce told a federal court Tuesday of hallucinating and attempting suicide as a result of solitary confinement.

Bruce, facing charges as the result of a hostage-taking incident at the British Columbia Penitentiary in June, said the reason he took the hostages was that he heard rumors he was going to be sent back to solitary.

Bruce and seven other convicts are plaintiffs in a civil action charging cruel and unusual punishment while in the solitary confinement unit at the penitentiary.

Bruce said he had not been in the general prison population since 1970, and that his reactions were slow when he was released from solitary.

He started taking barbiturates after he left solitary "because I couldn't function with other people," he added.

When he heard rumors that he was going to be put back in solitary, "I got one step ahead of them . . . I took a bunch of hostages," he added.

Bruce said he was concerned about his physical and mental deterioration while in solitary. "You read half a sentence and you find yourself chasing the rest of the sentence all over the page," he said. "You say to yourself, you're going stir-bugs, right?"

One issue in the case is whether Bruce and the other prisoners knew why they were in solitary confinement.

Asked if he was in solitary because of a hostage-taking incident in Prince Albert in November, 1973, Bruce denied that was the reason.

'Gouging' Store Remains Open

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal Food Prices Review Board has accused one North Vancouver food store of unjustifiably raising its prices — but the store remains open. Its manager has denied the accusation.

The market, a former IGA outlet, is the only operation singled out by the board after two weeks of price checking during the closure of some 125 supermarkets — mainly Safeway and Super-Valu stores in the Greater Vancouver area.

Manager Steven Young said Tuesday prices were on average lower than those of the regular supermarkets, although board officials reported contacting the store's wholesaler and suggesting "the possibility of gouging."

"As a result," says the review board report, "the wholesale organization cancelled (the store's) franchise and the store now operates entirely independently."

Young said, however, that the market took the initiative in breaking away from the franchise so it would be possible to seek out lower wholesale prices wherever available.

Young said that it was possible that the wrong prices were put accidentally on some items, and added that sometimes products come to the store with incorrect wholesale prices on them.

He said a "lady from the government" came to the store a couple of weeks ago but after checking the shelves announced to him that the prices were perfect.

The review board report also criticized the B.C. government for taking no action in the dispute.

"The greatest danger of gouging lies not in current food prices in B.C. but at the industrial bargaining table itself," Tuesday's report said.

"The longer the strike-lockout continues, the more likely it is that an excessive settlement will be reached between the immediate parties. In this way, after suffering the inconveniences . . . the consumer will pay the higher prices arising out of the settlement."

Workers Off At Cominco

ELKFORD (CP) — About 1,000 workers were off the job today at the fording coal operations of Cominco Ltd. as a result of two disputes.

About 80 workers walked off the job Monday after a truck driver was fired for falling asleep on the job.

They were joined Tuesday by the rest of the workers following a grievance filed by a female employee who said a supervisor made "sexual intimidations against" her.

SHUTDOWN OVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — The FMC of Canada Ltd. chemicals plant at Squamish, 30 miles north of here, has gone back into production to supply chlorine and caustic soda to an Alaska customer following a two-month shutdown.

The plant was closed and 50 employees were laid off July 24 as a result of the closure of British Columbia pulp mills by a labor dispute. All of FMC's output is used in pulp mill operations.

Plan for World Nimsick Urges

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadians must exploit coal as a resource to be shared with the world, mines minister Leo Nimsick of British Columbia told the Canadian Conference on Coal Tuesday.

"The world is getting so small that we've got to help plan for the needs of the world," said the minister who observed a number of European countries have used up their own reserves of metallurgical coal for making steel.

"We mlst not compete to get rid of our resources while the price is good. There must be orderly development for the good of all people.

"The future is bright for coal and, if we approach it in a co-operative way, I'm sure we can work wonders."

Eric Jamieson, of the federal department of energy, mines and resources said shrinking oil and gas reserves and world price solidarity are providing an unprecedented opportunity for the development of coal resources.

"The situation of most immediate concern to the federal government is the exposure of industrial consumers in central Canada to the unavailability of United States coal supplies beyond current captive and firm contractual commitments," he said.

WHALE PERMITS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Washington State has issued permits for commercial capture of four killer whales and temporary capture of another 10 for research.

Holders of the permits are: Sea World Aquarium in San Diego, Calif.; and the University of Washington.

The whale hunt probably will take place in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Permit issues come less than a week after a controversy arose surrounding capture of a 15-foot killer whale at Pedder Bay which touched off a confrontation between provincial and federal governments on the trapping of large mammals for public display.

Another Voice Is Raised

In a rare outburst of temerity Bank of Canada Governor Gerald Bouey has joined the mounting chorus for direct government action to halt inflation. Without ever mentioning wage, price and profit controls, he told the Saskatoon chamber of commerce that "many things other than monetary policy have also to be right before the economic system will work well." Throughout the speech it was obvious the governor was pointing the finger at the Trudeau administration.

Bouey also defended the bank's decision to raise interest rates from eight and one quarter to nine per cent recently, on the basis that it is in the public interest to stop the drift into deepening inflation. It is also essential, in his view, to keep the rate of money expansion under control. In other words, the bank is using the only tools it has to control inflation, while the federal government seems content to sit on the sidelines and watch an increasingly serious condition develop. The governor went even further to warn that unless measures are taken to control inflation Canada could face an inflation rate of 25 per cent.

Bouey's spirited defence of the bank's action in raising interest rates seems to be based on the logic that since no one else seemed to care, the bank had to take a hand. Yet he cannot deny that his action fueled inflation — the very thing that causes him anguish — through increased mortgage rates and 11 per cent plus borrowing rates on small loans. If the governor can be faulted on his methodology, his concern is laudable when compared with diffident federal action on inflation. It is almost as if a frustrated Bank of Canada watched in horror as a spendthrift government spread largesse without a thought to the creaking economy.

Even more significant, Bouey's voice is the latest, and possibly the most important, raised in criticism of government economic policies, or more accurately the lack of policies. It started with Finance Minister John Turner's abrupt cabinet resignation. Then Food Prices Review Board Chairman Beryl Plumptre complained that the government was failing to provide leadership. Former Deputy Minister of Finance Simon Reisman has also chimed in, saying income and price controls might be necessary. Andre Raynauld, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, favors a dramatic government action to control inflation. Now the Governor of the Bank of Canada has added his considerable voice to the fray. It is unusual for a government to be under such a barrage from its own economic advisors. The pressure mounts.

Faced with increasing public clamor plus a number of influential voices the government can no longer claim it lacks a consensus for strong measures. Wage, price and profit controls would present a difficult administrative problem. But that is only a detail compared with a 25 per cent inflation rate or the economic chaos that would soon follow if the government continues with its head in the clouds. Bouey's speech should bring the government down to earth.

Tourist Woes

Concern expressed by local businessmen in the tourist industry that Victoria in particular, and the province as a whole, may be pricing itself out of the tourist business seems, at best, somewhat premature. It also seems wild-eyed and irresponsible to blame only the provincial government for the situation, as Mayor Peter Pollen apparently does. Certainly, the Barrett administration has fueled inflation through high wage settlements and wild spending policies.

But there are a few other factors operating, we suggest, besides something of a double standard too. For example, one chamber of commerce official says the high prices of admission at tourist attractions here aren't the problem, but high prices for meals and accommodation are.

Economic conditions in the United States, from which come most visitors to Victoria, would also appear to be a decisive factor. Unemployment there has been much more widespread and the effects of the recession — some use the term depression — more severe than in Canada. The sudden 10-cent-a-gallon hike in gasoline prices — for which Dave Barrett can't be blamed — must have peeved American travellers as well.

Businessmen in the tourist trade, to be realistic, should have expected the American travelling public this year to be looking more sharply at motel and restaurant bills.

Businessmen cite another scapegoat — the $2.50 minimum hourly wage in force here. But it isn't that much higher than minimum wages in many American jurisdictions. For example, in Washington it's $2.10 — soon to rise to $2.30. And nobody would deny that B.C. is not a more expensive place to live — food (mostly imported from elsewhere) costs more, rents are much higher.

". . . did it ever occur to you that maybe nobody gives a damn? . . ."

What Coal Does to a Town

CROWS NEST PASS, Alta. — It was the kind of fall day that sends you laughing into winter—a scorching 80 degrees and a blue, cloudless sky. A day to breath in the air and to suck in the energy. Yet all the windows of Annie and Jack Marconi's house where I sit drinking coffee in the kitchen are shut tightly.

When I ask why, she points through the window. Down the hill that leads into the town of Coleman where the Marconis live rumbles a large truck. Behind it trails a black spume. Ten minutes go by and another truck grinds down the road. Behind it another black cloud.

Coal dust. Coal created Coleman at the turn of the century. Today coal is killing it.

No coal town anywhere, from Wales to New South Wales, is a neat and manicured place. Their quality comes, not from their looks, but from the clannish pride of their miners. Coleman has the same raw, defeated look of Glace Bay in Cape Breton. The difference is that Coleman belongs to the richest province in the country, the product not of poverty but of stupidity and inertia.

Wide Open Piles

Alberta hasn't so much overlooked Coleman, as looked the other way. Provincial regulations allow a maximum fallout of 20 tons of coal dust per square mile per month in residential areas. Recordings of the fallout upon the houses of Coleman regularly hit 200 tons per square mile per month.

Some of the dust comes from the trucks, their loads piled high above their sideboards and uncovered by a tarpaulin. Some of it comes from the coal cleaning plant, or "tipple" that stands in the centre of the town, its smokestack alternately belching out white steam and black smoke. Most of the dust, probably, comes from the stockpiles of fine coal that stand beside the tipple, wide open to the 80-miles-per-hour winds that roar down the pass.

Run your fingertips over a car washed the day before, and they come away black. Place a cloth on the inside of a window sill or at the foot of a door, and the next morning it is black.

Along Main Street, one-third of the buildings, false-fronted in the old western style, are boarded up and the rest haven't been painted for years—this although jobs in the mines now pay over $7 an hour and British Columbians from across the border six miles away come to shop here to escape their five per cent sales tax. In return, the men of the Crow's Nest Pass go west, to Sparwood,

ALBERTA COAL MINE
. . . at Grande Cache, Alta.

B.C., where the Ventura Hotel offers topless go-go girls, a delicacy unavailable in rural Alberta.

Once, Coleman had no choice. Or took for granted that it had none. In the 1950s, when the railways switched to diesel, Coleman was almost boarded up. At Blairmore, just down the road, the mine still is closed. John Sanyshyn, secretary of Local 2638 of the United Mine Workers, remembers that he was laid off eight times, once within a fortnight of Christmas. As for wages, "we couldn't push hard. The company told us it would close."

Today, coal again is king. Each ton that Coleman Colliery mines here is worth $50; three years ago the price was $17 a ton. Japan wants all the metallurgical coal it can get, Ontario Hydro needs 10 million tons of thermal coal a year after 1978. If the provincial government gave the go-ahead, six new mines would open, two of them probably in the Crow's Nest Pass.

Sometime next spring, provincial Energy Minister Don Getty will bring down new coal mining regulations that will unleash about $1 billion worth of investment.

"I realize that what we are now trying to do for coal is what probably should have been done for oil and gas back in the '50s," says Getty. "Our problem is that there is, nowhere in the world that I know of, a successful socio-economic model of coal mining."

Woolly Dogooders?

For a start, Getty can take the model of Coleman, and turn it upside down. The tipple, with its exposed stockpiles of coal, was built just seven years ago. To deflect winds away from the piles, the provincial environment department recently built a perforated steel wall around them. Mostly the wall tunnels the wind down onto the coal heaps.

The department also has helped fund a study into the feasibility of shifting the entire population out of town to a possible new mine site 10 miles away. Even if economic, the move would take five years.

Jack Marconi worked 43 years underground in the mines. Two years ago he retired and helped form a Citizens' Environmental Committee. "A bunch of woolly dogooders," said a Coleman store owner. "Those mines are our bread and butter."

"I don't want the mines to stop," says Marconi. "But I refuse to believe that in 1975 we can't have bread and butter that isn't covered in dust." The answer is no, not for the least five years, while Coleman decays, and the province fattens.

W. A. WILSON

Middle Years—Testing Time

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau is now well into that critical, two-year mid-term period which tests all governments to the full and humbles many of them a little later when they have to face the voters again.

When a government is freshly elected, even if it has been in power before, it always has a grace period with the public. All the people who voted for it have a vested interest in its success. Their own welfare is involved and, helpful to the men in power, there is that great intangible — the public's human reluctance to conclude that it has made a mistake.

By the time the middle years start, however, this has worn off. The government by then has had time to show what it can do, time to unveil any new plans, time to demonstrate that the political cupboard was properly stocked and not bare. Because the normal problems of any society are never easy to deal with and overcome, a government at this stage will almost certainly have fumbled a bit. But by then the public will generally see no reason for special tolerance. At that time, the men of power are on their own.

Perverse Attitude

In the present case, the ultimate vulnerability of the government is increased by the visible weakness of the opposition parties. The men opposing Pierre Trudeau and his colleagues in this parliament have been terribly ineffective. That is a situation that exposes all except the most rigorous ministers to the temptations of sloppiness.

The prime minister, oddly, is not at all rigorous in much that he does. He is not good at resisting the temptation to ram unpalatable and unnecessary things down the public throat and he is slow at recognizing the senseless harm he does himself.

There are other examples, unattractive to the public, but the ridiculous and unseemly insistence on using government-owned, publicly-financed helicopters for purely political purposes (not only personally but by his advance man) is a telling example of the sort of way in which this prime minister seeks out hospitality. That sat badly with the public and properly so because the solution was so simple and had so much precedent behind it — hand the bill for the political part of the trip to the Liberal party and let it pay it from party, not public, funds.

It is a strangely perverse attitude towards proper administration that leads any prime minister, with so easy and available a solution at hand, to go stubbornly out of his way to demonstrate his power to the pulbic upon whose support and co-operation he must finally depend. It is not a sensible approach to a problem and in the end people are likely to become uneasy at the hands of men who avoid the sensible solutions.

Language is becoming a dangerous issue in the country, largely in ways that are not necessary. There are at least 10 Quebec seats where resentment on this score could well affect the fortunes of the Liberal party less than three years from now and, if the wind ever begins to blow against a government, 10 seats can be of vast importance. They can be the key to power and wise men do not avoidably throw away such keys.

. . . heading into hard times

Language is also an issue here in the capital. To some extent, given the goals of the government, that is not avoidable but it is well within Trudeau's power to avoid exacerbating the problem.

In his public statements on language questions here, as they affect people who are both voters and public servants, the prime minister is never conciliatory and never grateful for the genuine efforts that have gone into the attempts to find solutions. Government offices are full of people who have tried very hard to make the government's language policies work, to overcome the inevitable administrative problems that have arisen and that are often ferociously severe.

It would not be abnormal for a leader to recognize that these people have made serious efforts under difficult circumstances, to do so would help defuse an unhappy issue. Yet the prime minister's approach, when he speaks out on the issue, is to be hectoring and scolding, to withhold both praise and thanks.

It has been a graceless performance that ignores the human strains that have been involved and that, again perversely, seeks almost deliberately to disperse goodwill and secure by force what could better be secured by helpful co-operation. In Montreal, the prime minister may not wish, for the most valid reasons, to intervene against Bill 22 (Quebec's Official Language Act) but a leader's demonstration of sympathy for people caught in awkward problems would not be costly — and might go a long way towards protecting his party's position in more seats than wise men ignore.

Some recent appointments have smacked so outrageously of cronyism that there has been resentment of them inside and outside politican circles. Whatever satisfaction they have given Trudeau remains obscure. The potential cost is not nearly so hard to see.

Hard Realities

Now the prime minister, through John Turner's resignation, is compelled to carry out a major cabinet reorganization. All those who have any effective voice with him — Senator Keith Davey, Jim Coutts and so on — would be wise to underline the reality that the middle years of a term in power are a testing for all governments. When they commence, the time for playing games ends. There is no time left to approach government as a diletante unlikely to discard it like a worn glove.

This should be a cabinet reorganization based on the hard realities of government and its burdens. It should not be built on even the most skilfully articulated theories or concepts. Government is extremely hard work and it is work that, to be done properly, must go on from morning until night, day after day. Some of the things that have gone on in this town have had a horribly unattractive, banana republic air to them. Others have shown the sheer incompetence involved in failing to come to grips with problems in good time.

The impending cabinet shuffle should be the occasion for bringing all this to an end, for recognizing that government is not a game but both an art and extremely hard work.

Liberals' Choice

Small grassroots members of the Liberal party may not have the substance of a group of select individuals interested in deposing David Anderson but in our own way we are waging our campaign to keep him as the B.C. Liberal party leader.

Of the sitting MLAs we feel his presence for the good of all is most vital. We need him as the B.C. Liberal party leader. We will not so easily see him deposed by any special group.

This past spring the membership overwhelmingly supported him and his stand against a Unity party which contrary to any other opinion has been seen the position of several so called Liberals.

David Anderson is our choice. Indeed we hope he is "little" Liberals' choice.

Our action is prompted by a feeling that all provincial liberals should not easily give in to such a 'fait-accompli' as seems to presently be employed.—Ed Wilton, Surrey.

Government Stupidity

It is a pity those concerned about the conversion of the Villa Royale apartment block wouldn't direct their venom at the people or functions that have given rise to the situation that brought the conversion about. Blame your governments, not the men who built or own the block. The latter are not in the welfare business to provide you with accommodation out of their pockets.

Your governments, both local and federal and to some degree provincial have done their best to do as you wanted them to do — stop developments. Even Ald. Glazier, so concerned now, was likely one in the past who along with our wealthy and comfortably housed mayor did their best to stop apartments being built. Had those extra buildings been available there would be a plentitude of apartments to rent and Villa Royale would likely have remained as it was.

The federal government did its best to prevent apartments being built by removing the tax shelter once available to investors. Also, the feds have done their best to drain off surplus investment money with their hare-brained CDC scheme and now comes the annual government money grab by Canada savings bonds. It is a wonder that anything at all gets built in Canada and particularly in this area what with the hurdles placed in front of every potential apartment builder by local councils.

Much more could be written about the stupidity that has prevailed at all government levels in Canada as applied to the housing industry simply because politicians can't stand the word profit when it comes to rents. Now you all are going to find out that unless there is a profit of some sort, regardless of what your politicians say, you just might find that tenting, year-in, year-out is not so hot.

By the way, I live in Villa Royale. I don't even know who owns it or really care to know. I'm just content to rent or lease as the owner desire, provided it fits my pocketbook. — Brian Brown, 324-964 Heywood.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of September 24, 1915

CHILLIWACK — With little business still to transact, the annual convention of the Union of British Columbia municipalities adjourned for luncheon today, having elected Mayor Stewart of Victoria as its new president for the coming year. He was given a close run in the voting by Mayor Gray of New Westminster, who was president for the past year. The UBCM passed resolutions asking the province to better define the term "wild land" in the Municipal Act and also urging the government to regulate the weight of loads on highways.

GLARING GAPS MAR U.N. TORTURE BAN

By PETER DEELEY
London Observer

GENEVA — For the first time the nations of the world have united in drawing up a charter both defining and outlawing torture. It was probably the most positive result of the work of more than one hundred countries at the fortnight-long meeting here of the United Nations Fifth Congress on Crime.

It has been a long and hard road since Amnesty International, the organization set up to protect political prisoners throughout the world, first had the idea two years ago of getting a code adopted that would ban the ill-treatment of all persons detained by police or other law enforcement agencies.

In the near future the draft declaration will go before the United Nations General Assembly for its approval. The ultimate objective will be the development of an international convention ratified by all nations.

Sadly, however, nobody in Geneva was able to come up with a way of making sure that the police and military obey this code. It is a fine-sounding high-minded set of declarations but without any teeth with which it can be implemented.

Professor Gerhard Muller, executive director of the crime congress, believes that at some stage the anti-torture declaration will obtain the same status as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. But he could only cite, as ways of making sure the code is followed, the means of educational persuasion, and "instilling a new spirit" in law enforcement agencies.

Muller was honest enough to concede that there was "scarcely a country in the world free from torture perpetrated by some government officials." It was indeed remarkable, when listening to the debates on this subject here, how many countries against whom allegations of gross torture have been levelled, were still happy to speak in favor of the idea of the declaration.

Under the code, torture constitutes "an aggravated and deliberate form of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment." Torture means "an act by which severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental, is intentionally inflicted by or at the instigation of a public official or a person, for such purposes as obtaining from him or a third person information or confession, punishing him for an act he has committed or is suspected of having committed, or intimidating him or other persons."

Some parts of the draft code were altered during the debates here among the various national legal and criminological experts. The most glaring change — and one which almost threatens to bring the code into "universal disrespect" in the words of one delegate afterwards — was to put capital punishment and corporal punishment outside the scope of the charter.

Until the last minute the torture definition had excluded pain or suffering arising only from lawful imprisonment. But the Ghana delegate said he wanted corporal punishment orders by a court also to be excluded.

Then came the Saudi Arabian delegate who, maintaining that his country was "in the vanguard of the fight against torture," still wanted capital punishment and judicially authorized acts such as whipping put outside the scope of the torture definition. He pointed out that in some countries, legal killing and minor physical punishments were regarded as a deterrent to crime.

The code was rewritten to put all "lawful sanctions" outside the code. As Canada and Denmark said afterwards "it all happened so fast we didn't really know what was going on." There was a move by some Asian countries in effect to permit conduct which could be described as torture when a country was at war or was threatened with war or was in a state of internal political instability. But that carried little weight in the congress. And one article now categorically states that no country can invoke these circumstances as justification for cruel treatment of detainees.

The declaration includes powers for those who are tortured to have the right of redress against his torturers. But here again it was asked "when a State permits torture is it likely to allow the victim to publicize his agonies? Isn't it more likely the government will move to protect the torturer?"

There had been a move originally to try to get some kind of cooperation between countries to limit more effectively hidden practices of torture. But the Soviet-block countries, which were among those who claimed that torture was not a problem for them, effectively thwarted this.

Privately, there were some police chiefs at the congress — though they refused to be named — who felt that in some emergencies "inhuman treatment" might be permissible. One cited the example of a bomb in a hotel. "What if I have arrested the bomber," he asked, "and I know that if I can extract its whereabouts from him, I can save the lives of hundreds of people? What do you expect to do?"

It is a continuing moral dilemma — a very relevant one in today's world. Amnesty International's answer as put to me by one of their delegates was two-fold.

"It is an exaggerated example, one which in practice we have not found to exist. Our experience is that torturers ill-treat their victims only when they have plenty of time. And, given that time factor, would the bomber not play for time? Many men have held out against torture for weeks. He only has to hold out for a few moments."

For some of the prisoners in the jails and military cells around the world the Geneva torture convention may ring as a hollow gesture. But, as the Amnesty man said: "Every little step counts."

Amnesty Plan Collapsed With Saigon

By JON NORDHEIMER

HALF MOON BAY, Calif. — When Saigon collapsed last spring, so did Gary Della Bitta's pledge to complete alternative service in the amnesty program created by President Ford a year ago in an executive order "to bind up the nation's wounds."

"It seemed so silly," the former Army deserter explained the other day as he walked the overcast shoreline on the peninsula below San Francisco. "The war in Vietnam had ended for the Vietnamese, but it was still going on for me and other American war resisters."

Della Bitta, whose return home last fall from long exile in Canada under the elemency program was chronicled in a series of articles in The New York Times, has not been the only dropout from President Ford's amnesty army.

More than 60 per cent of the 5,555 military deserters accepted in the program have stopped performing alternative public service, work that was assigned for periods up to 24 months to earn the participant a "clemency pardon" in place of a dishonorable discharge.

"The government had already wasted five years and seven months of my life by forcing me into Canada," Della Bitta said.

The military is prevented from prosecuting program dropouts since they have all been officially separated from the service, and the U.S. government, for political as well as legal reasons, has indicated that it will not prosecute even the most flagrant examples of bad faith among those who have broken the agreement.

In the two other components of the clemency program, involving unconvicted Selective Service violators and ex-Vietnam era servicemen with less than honorable discharges, the performance rate on alternative service is not yet clear.

In the first category, the so-called draft dodgers who hid out in the U.S. or went into exile, the incentive for completing alternative service is intensely felt, for unlike the deserter, these men are vulnerable to criminal prosecution if they do not abide by their pledge.

But there are only 718 individuals in this program. So far, 39 have been reported to the U.S. Attorneys in their districts for non-compliance, but it is not yet known if any of the federal prosecutors has moved on a case, according to a government spokesman.

Della Bitta, unlike the majority of military deserters, was college-trained, a biology major who perhaps could have found some satisfaction in working in a hospital or some medical institution. However, that kind of employment was not available in the Gilroy area, a small farming community about 40 miles south of San Jose, the nearest large city.

So he took a job with the Gilroy parks department as leaf-raker and tree-trimmer without pay on the chance that he could work his way on the payroll. When that hope dimmed, he went to work at the local junior high school as a lab assistant, again without pay, on speculation by school authorities that money from federal sources would eventually be developed to support him.

He worked that way for three months, he said, before he was informed that the money would not be forthcoming. He quit this spring and has become a masseur at a health club operated by a national motel chain. He has refused to take welfare.

Equipment Imports Boost China's Trade Deficit

By ROSS H. MUNRO
The Globe and Mail

PEKING — One recent midnight half a new factory was moving slowly down Chang An, the wide main street of Peking. A long cavalcade of trailer trucks, flying large red flags symbolizing not danger but Communism, were hauling massive processing tanks for a new petrochemical or fertilizer operation.

On the sides of the tanks was written Made in Japan.

It was another instance of the expensive technology China is importing and the mounting trade deficit this country is accumulating in the process.

Wheat import cutbacks ahead?

That growing trade deficit is beginning to have far-reaching consequences. Among them:

—Chinese officials are facing increasingly difficult and potentially conflict-laden choices over what machinery China will import and what machinery it will decide to do without;

—Businessmen on buying trips here are finding that Chinese exporting companies, presumably anxious to reduce China's trade deficit, are offering a greater variety of goods at reasonable prices.

Despite its ideological hostility to capitalism and its doctrine of self-reliance in its economic development, China doesn't hide its need to import high technology machinery from the West.

"Our self-reliance does not mean closing the doors to the outside world," declares the journal Red Flag, China's arbiter of ideological purity.

"It is necessary to import some equipment and to introduce some techniques from abroad."

China looks for capital goods which will lead directly to increased production — oil processing equipment, entire fertilizer plants and steel rolling mills. According to U.S. statistics, China is spending about $1 billion a year on importing complete factories. Less grand items raise the capital import bill a lot higher.

The People's Republic of China does not release its trade figures. But the highly regarded Japan External Trade Organization estimates that China's trade deficit last year was almost $1.3 U.S. and will climb to $3 billion in 1978 before it begins to decline.

Interviews here with businessmen and diplomats have revealed that the Chinese government is using a number of different methods to finance the trade deficit which has resulted largely from the importation of expensive capital equipment.

While all mention of loans is avoided, for instance, some suppliers of capital equipment are accepting stretched out periods of payment.

In other cases, Chinese officials have obliquely suggested barter deals that amount to credit arrangements. A supplier of oil pipeline equipment, for instance, would agree to take payment in oil over a period of years.

The Bank of China is obtaining what amounts to foreign loans from major banks in Hong Kong and Europe. The Bank of China ensures that corresponding foreign banks deposit significantly more foreign currency with the Bank of China than the foreign currency China deposits with the foreign bank. The surplus is to all intents and purposes a loan.

A well informed source in Peking says the Bank of China has recently gone much further, borrowing large sums of money directly from European banks. Understandably, no more details are currently available.

Proof positive that Peking is going into debt to capitalistic banks would be an extreme political embarrassment.

Some Western diplomats in relatively close contact with the Chinese are picking up some evidence of another important ramification of China's import-export crunch: Chinese officials are subjecting capital import proposals to increasingly tough scrutiny. What this means is that some proposals are losing out. A ministry which insists that oil exploration equipment is vital, for example, might be losing out to another ministry which insists equally vehemently that railway rolling stock must be imported. Or a provincial government which is demanding a steel rolling mill might lose out to another province which is demanding a fertilizer plant.

As the crunch gets worse over the next two or three years, the potential for significant political conflict within the Chinese political system will probably be immense. But whether evidence of such conflict will surface for Westerners to see is doubtful.

During the past week, however, there has been evidence that China is going to try to decrease its imports of wheat and other foodstuffs.

At present, China declares that even though it is self-sufficient in food it makes sense to import wheat and export rice. But if China could significantly cut its wheat imports while maintaining its level of rice exports it could measurably reduce its trade deficit. This seems to be one aim of the major agricultural conference held this week in Shansi province. Two messages appeared to emerge from the conference — agriculturally poor countries must aim for self sufficiency and all communes, probably particularly wheat-growing communes, must accelerate mechanization.

The other way out would be a concerted Chinese effort to increase its exports of a broad range of products. Again there is evidence that this is already under way. Particularly during the past few months, North American, European and Japanese businessmen say, it has been easier to do business with the Chinese. The businessmen say Chinese export officials are more flexible and accommodating when it comes to prices, quantities and delivery dates.

Canadian Bicycle Makers Say Orders Keep Rolling In

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian bicycle manufacturers and retailers report that sales have stabilized this year and they expect them to remain steady in the future.

An estimated one million bicycles will be sold in Canada this year, down from 1.5 million sold in the 1973 peak year but more than 740,000 sold annually before 1971.

Unlike the United States bicycle market, Canadian manufacturers say they were able to avoid a severe sales crunch this year because the domestic market was not saturated. Most dealers did not overstock last year so they were able to place new orders this year.

But several retailers and distributors reported that Canada Cycle and Motor Co. of Toronto overproduced in 1974 and had to sell bicycles at reduced prices early this season to deplete its stocks. Some bicycle importers also had excess inventories.

But supply and demand in the industry as a whole has stabilized and supply shortages that continued into the 1974 season have been eliminated.

Bicycle dealers and manufacturers say Canadian buyers are becoming more selective in their purchases and are willing to pay more to get quality products.

The trend to higher quality bicycles has come despite a steady increase in prices. The four Canadian manufacturers — CCM, Raleigh Industries of Canada Ltd. of Toronto, Sekine Canada Ltd. of Rivers, Man., and Victoria Precision Works Co. Ltd. of Montreal — all increased prices on their products at the beginning of 1975.

Further price increases seem probable for next season.

The price of imported bicycles has risen even more rapidly than bikes produced in Canada due primarily to the weakness of the Canadian dollar and the strength of European currencies.

A 25-per cent duty on imported bicycles has also affected prices.

But price increases have been below the inflation rate over the last decade making this a good time for consumers to buy, Peter Kent of Bloor Cycle says.

He predicts that unless the value of the Canadian dollar improves or other currencies decrease, price increases for bicycles will be substantial in the spring of 1976.

Stelco Denies 'Gouge'

TORONTO (CP) — Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. has denied a statement by a union official that the company recently raised steel prices by double the amount needed to cover the cost of a new contract for 15,000 workers.

A Stelco spokesman said the allegations "are obviously irresponsible and unfounded in the light of Stelco's historical pricing policy," adding that policy was supported by the 1974 Estey inquiry into the steel industry.

The controversial statement was made at an International Labor organization meeting in Geneva by Michael Fenwick, an official of the United Steelworkers of America, District 6 in Toronto.

He said, in a text released by the union office here, that Stelco and other steel companies "have increased the burden of inflation on everyone."

Last July and August, Stelco raised by 10 to 11 per cent its prices on a range of steel products. Other producers raised prices by about the same amount.

Fenwick had suggested that Stelco's 1975 profit, not including the recent price increases, would have been $117 million or a 12 per cent return on investment.

The Stelco spokesman, who said the company has heard only indirectly of Fenwick's statement, quoted from the Estey inquiry report to the effect that Canadian steelmakers had not managed their inventories in order to get higher-than-normal profit margins.

Lynn Williams, director of the Steelworkers' District 6, replied that his union thinks the Estey inquiry interpreted its terms of reference in the narrowest context. Fenwick is an assistant to Williams.

Nine-Month Loss For Holiday Inns

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Commonwealth Holiday Inns of Canada reported a net loss Tuesday of $448,900 or 14 cents a share for the nine months ending July 31 compared with a profit of $1,195,700 or 21 cents a share in the same period last year.

However, chairman David Rubinoff said preliminary results for August show the company has recovered its earlier losses and reached a profit position to that date. But the profit for the year ending Oct. 31 will be substantially below that of last year.

In an interim report to shareholders, Rubinoff said the nine-month results reflect unsatisfactory operating conditions for the hotel industry which persisted during much of the period.

He said commercial activity in Canada, particularly the tourist industry, continued to be adversely affected by the severe recession in the United States, which is the source of a large percentage of the company's business.

"Operating results reflect the effect of inflationary pressures on costs and a drop in the occupancy level of many of our Canadian inns."

Business off-shore continues to be substantially below expectations, he said. The company recently ceased operation of three off-shore inns. They were located in Madeira, Portugal, Tignes, France, and St. Kitts, West Indies.

The company, of which about 26 per cent is owned by the U.S.-based Holiday Inns Inc., now operates 65 inns.

Block Bros. To Buy Own Shares

VANCOUVER (CP) — Block Bros. Ltd. will purchase up to 1 million of its own shares through the Vancouver and Toronto stock exchanges beginning Oct. 1, company chairman Arthur J. Block has announced.

Shares will be purchased from time to time at the then prevailing market price. The program terminates March 31, 1976, or on the acquisition of 1 million shares, whichever is earlier.

Block said the repurchase plan will give the company a more realistic debt-to-equity ratio and will increase the leverage available on its capital base, particularly in view of the higher appraised value of assets, which does no appear in book value figures.

There were 6,395,308 shares outstanding as last report. Purchase of 1 million shares will reduce outstanding common shares by about 16 per cent.

Allmand Hits Police Threat

MONTREAL (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Tuesday he hopes Canada's policemen will not carry out their threat to hold a cross-country work stoppage if the cabinet commutes the death sentence of Rene Vaillancourt.

Vaillancourt, 27, is scheduled to be hanged Oct. 31 for murdering Toronto policeman Leslie Maitland while fleeing the scene of a bank holdup in 1973.

The Canadian Police Association has called on policemen across Canada to observe a four-hour study session — "period of mourning" — if the cabinet commutes the death sentence.

Allmand, speaking to reporters following a speech here, said government on the basis of demonstrations is "a poor way to govern."

He said he hoped the police express their opinions on the issue of capital punichment "in a democratic way."

He added police have a duty to enforce the law as made by Parliament.

Allmand said the question of commuting Vaillancourt's sentence is up to the cabinet.

He indicated that decision might come as early as next week.

The cabinet, he added, may decide to present legislation on capital punishment before the scheduled date of Vaillancourt's hanging.

Parliament is to resume sitting Oct. 14.

The solicitor-general said he will present his proposals for the legislation to the cabinet next week, but would not say precisely what they would be.

Earlier, Allmand told about 120 members of the Mount Royal Liberal Association he would present proposals aimed at "protecting the public" as well as providing for "a more humane system" to control convicted murderers.

LANG STAYS ON

EDMONTON (CP) — Although opposed to capital punishment, federal Justice Minister Otto Lang says he will not resign if the cabinet allows Rene Vaillancourt to hang.

The minister made the statement Tuesday in response to a question during a bearpit session with University of Alberta law professors and students on criminal code amendments.

Vaillancourt, convicted of killing Toronto police constable Leslie Maitland in a 1973 bank robbery, has been granted a stay of execution until Oct. 31.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, also a vocal opponent of capital punishment, has stated he will quit his office if cabinet votes to send another man to the gallows.

"I believe capital punishment is not a necessary thing in Canada today; that we can move to a higher form of dignity as 41 other nations in the world have . . .," said Lang.

RENT SUBSIDY BETTER—STUDY

VANCOUVER (CP) — A system of shelter payments to the poor is better than government rent controls, two University of British Columbia professors say in a study.

The study by S. W. Hamilton and David Baxter of the UBC commerce and business administration department was done for the Winnipeg-based Appraisal Institute of Canada.

The system of shelter allowances is better because "all households in the same income bracket are treated equally," they say.

"This system would not only ensure reasonable consumer choice as between ownership and rental, but also shelter and other commodities."

When British Columbia introduced rent controls 18 months ago, the government was faced with a system of artificial controls that gave administrators a near-impossible task of determining equitable prices.

Under the system, "the government is faced with tenant expectations based on policy, not market reality."

While the government set a maximum rent increase of 10.6 per cent, landlords have assumed that is the amount they will get whether it is justified or not.

Navy 'Ignoring' Ecology Laws

SEATTLE (AP) — The United States Navy is ignoring "the spirit and intent of federal and state environmental legislation" in construction of the Trident nuclear submarine base, the state ecology department said Tuesday.

Department head John A. Biggs criticized the navy in a letter to the Army Corps of Engineers, which has jurisdiction over all construction in navigable waters. The letter was in response to a request by the navy to the corps for a permit to build a pier as part of the Trident project.

"It has been our experience that federal agencies have generally attempted to abide with," environmental regulations, Biggs said. "The navy does not appear to be following this principal."

Biggs complained that the navy's environmental impact statement was a "generalized assessment" of the project when it should have been "a detailed description and evaluation of the individual actions to be taken and their subsequent effects on the environment."

Biggs said the pier "will result in the loss of substantial public right of navigation and will destroy an extensive amount of beach with the associated fish and game resources."

Pedersen Report Under Study

The Pedersen report on research and development commissioned earlier this year in the wake of firings from the B.C. education department is expected to be made public next week.

A spokesman said Tuesday Education Minister Eileen Dailly is examining the report from a special task force headed by University of Victoria vice-president Dr. George Pedersen.

Pedersen's team was charged with surveying practical aspects of research and development in various government agencies and the private sector.

The job was designed to go beyond a study of the education department and could include models for other government departments.

The consultant report was commissioned after the firing of former research and development director Stanley Knight and division employees.

Tortured, Says Patty Hearst, And Forced to Lie by SLA

Times News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst, who once derided speculation she was brainwashed, now swears that she lied under duress when she told of her rebirth as the revolutionary "Tania" in the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army band.

Hearst's written testimony, contradicts many of her tape-recorded pronouncements from the underground, and likely will be disputed in court.

Hearst, 21, says she was driven to insanity by her SLA kidnappers who tortured her physically and mentally.

She says she was blindfolded, bound and locked in a closet for weeks while constantly threatened with death.

An affidavit signed by her and submitted in federal court Tuesday said the brutalization led to a fantasy that her parents had abandoned her, the police would shoot her on sight and if she tried to run away her abductors would kill her.

Defence lawyers turned the document over to U.S. Judge Oliver Carter to back their motion that she be released on bail so she could be examined by doctors chosen by the Hearsts.

Carter refused to let her out of jail. He adjourned her bail hearing until next Tuesday and ordered she be examined "forthwith" by three court-appointed psychiatrists. She was still considered her a "flight risk," he added.

"Just because a person is mentally incompetent, you shouldn't allow them to wander down the street," he said.

The "insanity" approach quite obviously may be the basis of the defence when she is brought to trial on 22 felony counts including kidnapping, bank robbery and assault with a deadly weapon.

Defence lawyer Vincent Hallinan said Hearst still was "right on the verge of tipping one way or another" in terms of sanity.

During her entire time in captivity she was insane, he told reporters outside the courtroom.

"Any jury would acquit her in a minute," he added.

The affidavit, however, does not explain her apparent signals of continued revolutionary ardor since her arrest — clenched fist salutes, greetings to comrades and self-description on her booking sheet as an "urban guerrilla."

The document, also ignores a 17-month period during which Miss Hearst was a fugitive.

During that time she stated in one tape recording that she "died" with six SLA comrades in a May, 1974, shootout with Los Angeles police and was reborn to new revolutionary fervor.

"I know what I have to do," she said in that tape of June 7, 1974. "My comrades didn't die in vain. While I have no death wish, I have never been afraid of death. For this reason, the brainwash-duress theory of the pig Hearsts has always amused me."

The affidavit's tale of terror begins with Miss Hearst's abduction at Berkeley, Calif., on Feb. 4, 1974, and ends when she says she was forced to help rob a San Francisco bank on April 15, 1974. For many of these weeks, she recalls being locked in a closet.

Patty leaves jail for court

"The closet was hot and extremely uncomfortable," the affidavit said. "She was given food but was unable to eat any for a period of about 10 days, and for all that period was unable to dispose of her body wastes."

It said the SLA member "Cinque," escaped convict Donald DeFreebe, brought tape recorders into the closet on which she recorded widely distributed statements.

When her blindfold was removed, "she . . . saw that all of her captors were armed with revolvers, shotguns and other weapons."

The affidavit suggests the kidnappers' most potent weapon in a battle for Miss Hearst's mind were constant reports that her parents had abandoned her and would let her die.

When she returned recently to San Francisco, it was to find out if her parents still loved her, the affidavit says.

The document said the SLA's pressure finally broke her.

"She finally came to the realization that she was becoming insane, and fought to ward off this condition," the affidavit says.

The document does not mention the April 4, 1974, tape in which Miss Hearst announced she had taken the name "Tania" and decided voluntarily to stay with the SLA.

"I have never been forced to say anything on any tape," she said then. "Nor have I been brainwashed, drugged, tortured, hypnotized or in any way confused. As George Jackson wrote, 'It's me, the way I want it, the way I see it.'"

Eleven days later, she was photographed holding an automatic rifle on custmoers during a robbery of a branch of the Hibernia Bank.

Her affidavit says she was forced to participate under threat of death.

After the robbery, Miss Hearst said in another tape, "As for being brainwashed, the idea is ridiculous to the point of being beyond belief."

The affidavit contends her words were the lies of an insane woman.

The affidavit concludes she was in a fog, unable to distinguish actuality from reality, from the time of the bank incident until she was arrested.

She first returned to the real world, it claims, when she hugged her mother, father and sisters in jail.

The affidavit is also in contrast to a tape recording made of a conversation between Patty and a friend, Patricia Tobin, who visited her Saturday in the San Mateo jail in Redwood City.

The tape was produced Tuesday at a hearing for Steven Soliah, the house painter who rented the apartment in which Hearst and Wendy Yoshimura ware captured.

There was this interchange:

Miss Tobin — "Who is he (Soliah)? Is he the guy you rented the house from?"

Hearst (giggling) — "No, I lived with him. I finally got to see him up in the jail. You know, I got to kiss him. And then I had to leave to see about my bail. I wonder if I can help with his $75,000 bail. He can't possibly come up with it."

U.S. Candidates Get Protection

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders Tuesday ordered Secret Service protection for all qualified presidential candidates, starting Oct. 1, while a push began in both the House and the Senate for strong gun control legislation.

Senate minority leader Hugh Scott said that under the qualifying test adopted by the congressional leadership group, it appeared that Democratic senators Lloyd Bentsen and Henry Jackson, Rep. Morris Udall and Alabama Gov. George Wallace would all be eligible for protection.

Others would receive protection as they met the test.

Jackson, asked whether he would want such protection, told a reporter, "I don't need it."

Bentsen said, "not at this stage, but perhaps later in the heat of a campaign."

A qualified candidate would be anyone eligible for federal subsidies in presidential primaries under the new federal election law.

To be eligible for subsidies, Scott said, an individual must raise $5,000 from contributions of $250 or less in at least 20 states.

Juvenile Bill Drafted

OTTAWA (CP) — A draft bill unveiled by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand today would double the age of criminal responsibility to 14 and make it impossible to charge anyone under 18 without consent of an attorney-general.

The bill would replace the 67-year-old Juvenile Delinquents Act, which applies to children over six and can put them in the lock-up not only for Criminal Code, provincial and municipal offences, but for "sexual immorality or any similar form of vice."

Only Criminal Code and related federal offences would be included under the proposed law, which leaves the rest to the provinces.

It notes that its proposed system will mean a heavy public outlay for trained manpower and proper facilities.

Allmand said in a statement that Ottawa is ready to discuss cost-sharing with the provinces.

He said the proposals will be discussed with MPs, the provinces, interest groups and the public before legislation is introduced in Parliament.

The report was produced by a departmental committee under Deputy Solicitor-General Roger Tasse after two years of work.

It follows a two-year attempt to get through Parliament the young offenders bill, which was criticized as "Criminal Code for children" because of emphasis on courtroom procedure.

It also was slammed by the provinces which said they didn't have the money to implement facilities called for by the Juvenile Delinquents Act, let alone by the proposed law.

TV Ad Change Reminder

OTTAWA (CP) — Cable television companies in the Toronto-Hamilton area have been ordered to prepare to delete commercials from American TV broadcasts and substitute them with Canadian material.

Renewing most of the cable licences in the area for a three-year-period to March 31, 1978, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) said today the cable companies should report on progress by the end of this year on implementing the new policy.

The CRTC proposed last year that, in order to carry out the objectives of the Canadian broadcasting system, cable companies should "delete commercial messages from television signals received from broadcasting stations not licensed to serve Canada, and to substitute suitable replacement material in the place of such messages."

School Tax Change

SALMON ARM (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett indicated Tuesday his government may lift some of the tax burden on property.

Mid-way in the first leg of his fall tour of the province, Barrett gave several replies which indicated to reporters covering his tour that school taxes may be removed from the property tax.

Questioned about a 1972 election promise to lighten the tax burden on property, Barrett said, "we will keep our schedule, maybe even accelerate it a little." The schedule referred to would remove school taxes from real property within five years of the NDP government taking office.

Asked at Armstrong later in the day when he would remove school taxes from property, Barrett said, "just watch the spring budget."

Later at a public meeting at Vernon, where about 1,500 persons saw an egg tossed in front of him, Barrett made no mention of the school tax removal.

He used most of his speech to describe the accomplishments of his government in the three years it has been in office.

He was interrupted several times by heckling and jeers but won cheers when he described his government's social programs uch as Mincome and Pharmacare.

Boycott Of Fords Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A Montreal consumer protection group has called for a boycott of new and used cars made by Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd.

The association has obtained internal company documents showing the U.S. parent, Ford Motor Co., concedes there is premature rusting on 1969-73 models and the association says it believes the problem continued in 1974 models.

The Automobile Protection Association (APA) wants the company to reopen an earlier program under which about 8,000 Ford owners received free or partly-paid repairs for rusting.

Phillip Edmonston, APA president, said his organization will have the support of Ralph Nader's Washington-based Centre for Automotive Safety in its call for a boycott of Ford products.

It was the Nader group that earlier this year made public copies of the Ford Motor Co. document under which free or partly-paid repairs were made to about 70,000 1969-72 U.S.-owned vehicles that had rusting problems, regardless of their mileage.

Ford of Canada subsequently confirmed it had paid for repairs to about 8,000 Canadian-made vehicles, including 1969 to 1973 models, if owners had asked for repairs.

The APA also has obtained confidential company documents in which Ford Motor Co. acknowledged that it had "a serious vehicle rust problem on our 1969 through 1973 vehicles.

IF A PICTURE is worth 1,000 words, can it be worth $2,000 as well? Ceremonial presentation last week by MLA Jim Gorst (second from right) to regional directors Dick Emery, Mac Tipton and Earl Pallister was to mark turnover of $74,700 grant from province toward Juan de Fuca curling rink. It came three months after cheques were issued. In fact Gorst said he inadvertently brought wrong cheque. The one in picture is for $1,600 grant towards Little League baseball in James Bay.

Gorst's Tardiness Blamed For Loss of Nearly $2,000

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst cost the taxpayers almost $2,000 in loan interest by taking three months to deliver two provincial government grant cheques, Premier Barrett was told today.

In a letter to the premier, regional board chairman Jim Campbell offered these details on the cost of Gorst's tardiness:

The provincial government issued two cheques, each for $37,350 and dated May 30 and June 12, payable to the Capital Regional District as part of a grant towards construction of the Juan de Fuca curling rink.

"We have determined that they were mailed to (Gorst) on 20th June," Campbell's letter says, "but . . . were not received here until 16 September. This was the day following a ceremonial presentation . . . by Mr. Gorst.

"The delay in receipt of these funds has required our temporary bank financing to meet payment obligations. Interest in the interim is calculated to be $1,897.

"This amount represents a 'lost cost' which will be capitalized in our total project costs. It is simply an unnecessary contribution to the bankers out of recreation funds."

In his letter, Campbell says he appreciates that a local MLA, who may have had a role in the applicaton for such funds, may be entitled to some recognition.

"May I suggest however," he says to Barrett, "that unless you can be assured that the MLA is capable of handling cheques efficiently, you might adopt a policy of forwarding grant funds promptly and directly to the beneficiary, and sending the MLA a facsimile which would be quite as satisfactory for ceremonial purposes."

Gorst said today that a check of his office records show he got the cheques July 22.

"Then I was away from time to time . . . and it takes time to make arrangements, get people together.

"I've got a bigger job than Jim Campbell's got, and a hell of a lot more to do."

Speeders 'Laughing' As Tickets Tripled

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

"They just aren't afraid of getting points anymore . . . and believe it or not they aren't taking heed of warning about the crackdown on speeders."

The crackdown was launched last week by the Saanich force in an effort to halt dangerous driving.

Owens said that the new system of demerit points, introduced by the provincial government along with the Insurance Corporation of B.C., is one of the main contributors to increased speeding, especially along the Pat Bay Highway.

The inspector said that the number of tickets issued since his force started the crackdown last week has tripled, but people are still speeding.

Under the demerit point system a driver is penalized up to $400 when paying for a drivers' certificate for obtaining the maximum 20 demerit points. A total of three demerit points is issued for each speeding infraction.

"But drivers can add up a total of 60 demerit points before their licences are actually suspended and it doesn't make any difference to the total penalty," said Owens.

Under the old system, however, the motorist could be charged heavily for insurance premiums based on the driving record, and in addition to point penalties, police could issue fines with speeding tickets.

Owens suggested the number of drivers with the maximum demerit points is increasing and police checks seem to indicate they've gone over the maximum before their licences are actually suspended.

Problems with the Motor-Vehicle Branch computer may in part cause the time lag, he said.

Saanich police have started a new procedure to speed up the suspension process. The police check with the branch every time they stop a driver whose point total has hit the maximum.

MVB superintendent of driver suspension, Rip Repasse, said today the number of licence suspensions this year has increased about 25 per cent — some 6,000 driver suspensions.

When the branch becomes aware the demerit point maximum has been reached, a notice of intent is issued to the driver warning of licence suspension.

Repasse said the system allows the individual to make a submission to the superintendent of motor-vehicles, in which case the driver's file is then reviewed.

If no submission is made a final notice is sent out.

If a driver fails to acknowledge the notice, a sheriff or police officer is sent to the driver's home.

Benefits of the system, said Repasse, are that the person who has the demerit points pays the penalty in a higher drivers' certificate charge. It's tied to his licence rather than an insurance premium.

"It's more equitable."

Asked if he feels that a higher fine for demerit points would accomplish a decrease in speeding, he said "that's something you'd have to inquire with ICBC. They base the charge on what they feel rather than what we feel."

In Saanich, patrol checks are being stepped up on a 24-hour basis; the force's three radar cars are on duty and the former policy of giving warning tickets to first offenders has been scrapped.

Central Saanich and Sidney police forces are also stepping up patrols.

POLICE HUNT GUN-WIELDER

Police are looking for a homemade campertruck whose driver forced two U.S. tourists off the Malahat highway Tuesday and later threatened them with a rifle.

The elderly tourists, unhurt in the incident, said the driver pointed a .30-.30 rifle and told them to get away after they overtook him near Goldstream Park.

They were unable to get his licence number as he sped off toward Victoria because the plate was dirty, they said.

A third party reported the incident to Colwood RCMP at 4:25 p.m., and police were alerted to look for the 1964-67 brown Ford camper with a rounded top and smashed back door.

$18,000 for Home She Can't Live In

After paying $18,000 for a one-bedroom home at 4154 Holland on June 16, Mrs. Araceli De Ochoa and her four-year-old daughter can't live in it.

She appealed to Saanich council's public works committee Tuesday for assistance.

The problem is that since August, 1970, the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health has refused to allow the house to be occupied because the lot is too small for a septic tank and other sewage problems.

Development engineer J. R. Walker said rejection notices for occupancy had been given five times since the initial one, the last time as late as November, 1974.

Chairman Ald. Sandy Noel suggested Mrs. De Ochoa should seek legal advice.

She said today she is not interested in getting her money back at this point but would rather find some way of receiving official permission to live in the house.

She said she had no idea that occupancy of the house was impossible when she bought from Sawyer Enterprises Ltd. She was not given this information by Sawyer, she claimed.

Without a home, she and her daughter have been living in a motel at $23 a night. Now a friend has sublet his home to her until Oct. 25.

She came to Canada from Spain seven years ago and works as a secretary to support herself and her daughter.

"The house is very small, 500 square feet, and very run down," she said. "That's why it was so cheap, I thought. Still, if I got my money back I would still be without a home."

She said, after she bought the house she was told by neighbors that it hadn't been occupied for seven years.

Sawyer could not be reached for comment this morning.

Prisoner Assault Denied

Victoria police Inspector Lyle Somers denied four Wilkinson Road inmates were assaulted by guards at the city jail Tuesday when brought in for provincial court.

His statement came after the inmates appearing for statutory remand told Judge D. K. McAdam they had been "accosted unjustly".

"It appears it was a case of seeking publicity," Somers said. "As far as I can determine there was no incident. The allegations have been checked into, and I find no basis for them."

CITY MAN KILLED

Steven Parkes, 24, son of George Parkes of 224 Howe, died early Tuesday morning in a car-truck collision two and a half miles west of Keremeos.

The head-on collision occurred shortly after midnight, said Keremeos RCMP. The truck driver, Joseph Engles of Westbank, was treated at hospital and released.

Q. Can you tell me something about the Rhodes Scholarship? C.T.

A. It was established in 1902 with money left by Cecil John Rhodes, an English colonial statesman. His aim was to build and strengthen the British Empire and to bring about a closer union among English-speaking peoples. The award entitles students from the British Commonwealth, South Africa and the U.S. to two years' residence and study at Oxford University in England. Rhodes scholars receive about $2,400 a year which includes living expenses and tuition.

Q. I am 16 and would like to get involved in a drill team for girls. Is there one in Victoria? — T.B.

Teacher Bargaining Ready to Go Oct. 2

First salary bargaining talks between lower Vancouver Island teachers and school trustees have been tentatively set for Oct. 2, teachers' spokesman Frank Mather said today.

The meeting will be held in Greater Victoria school board offices, he said.

Five school districts will be included in the regional bargaining zone, which was set up under legislation passed at the spring session of the legislature.

The sixth district scheduled to be in the zone, Lake Cowichan, will bargain at the local level at the request of its teachers.

Teachers and trustees normally bargain together until mid-October, when a conciliator is called in to help.

Our Man in Cutlets Wasn't Exactly Licking His Chops

We're back in Courtenay and it's 6:25 on Tuesday evening.

To me, the seconds ticking their way toward 6:30 are like the countdown for another Apollo space shot or those awful moments before you have to take the stage on opening night.

My Saturday column dealt with genial Courtenay butcher Bill Wheten and his staff and the warmth behind their weekly "Old Folks' Night" when 100 or so old age pensioners flock to Central Meats each Tuesday evening to buy at cost.

Well when I approached Bill, he suggested the best way to get the "inside story" would be to slip on an apron and go behind the counter and sell meat, thereby learning first-hand exactly how the old folk felt about the scheme.

Thanks Bill.

Seemed a good idea when I was in Victoria. Now I'm up here and there are only five minutes left before the doors are flung open, I'm not so sure.

It's tense in the back room at Central Meats. So far, there's only Bill, his wife Michele and me. And Bill says we need six—four on the counter, one on the cash register and one to do a bit of extra cutting out back—plus one on the door to let the customers in at about 10 at a time.

Each Tuesday night, a couple of the eight staff members come back to help out (without pay, of course).

"I never ask them — they

work it out themselves," says Bill.

And there are usually three or four volunteers.

But here we are this Tuesday night, just about ready to start and I'm the only volunteer. Marvellous.

Bill's an obvious student of human nature but he didn't need to be too astute to relize I was being plagued by feelings of my own inadequacy.

"Don't worry," he implored. "Everyone who started, started just as you started."

That's fine, but right now I was wishing like hell I hadn't said I'd ever get started!

"Volunteers come in here and don't know a T-bone from a chop," says Bill, Still trying to soothe my nerves. "But it's a great way to watch and see how they handle people. In fact, I've got three former volunteers on my regular staff now."

Then, with the crowd swelled to about 35 to 40 out front, the back door opened and in came three more of my co-workers. Thank Heaven.

Time had run out. It was 6:30 and Jean Henderson was letting the first lot in the front door. We filed in behind the counter and for those mad first few minutes, I was lost. I just sort of hovered in the background, desperately trying to get out of the way.

At last I plucked up enough courage to try to serve my first customer.

"Can I help you?" I ventured, feeling extremely doubtful that I could, in fact, help anyone.

"Yes, I'd like a nice piece of sirloin steak, please."

Now that sounds simple enough. But it's not. It might look simple enough from your side of the counter. But try it the other way round.

Now bacon I can tell at a glance but one kind of steak looks like every other kind of steak to me and, you see, all the little labels are facing the customers. So you twist your body like a contortionist trying to read the type of meat and the price. Or you slide open the glass doors and turn each label round to read it, and while doing that risk getting your arm caught by a zealous co-worker looking for something a little further up the counter.

Even when you have finally located the sirloin steak, it's still not easy for a novice. I, for one, don't know a nice piece from a nasty piece.

But just as I was contemplating this, Bill Wheten stepped in and rescued me with his easy-going manner.

"This piece all right, love?" he asked and he got big grin in return.

There are, however, many other problems.

Like, I don't know if you've ever tried reading along the line — one of countless lines — on scales? I thought my eyesight was all right until I tried that. And I still don't know what a five-cent variation is.

You might think wrapping is simple enough, too, but the only wrapping up I've done is the kind one does on Christmas Eve and I'm afraid several elderly customers left the shop carrying packages of meat that looked more like gifts.

But the dear old customers more than made up for all my discomfort with their patience and understanding.

They come to shop . . . for meat and friendship

Like Mrs. Clifford, who told me she was 90 ("and I still do my garden") and then laughed gaily while I chased three circular frozen veal cutlets madly around the floor.

My next customer asked why the veal cutlets (I seem to have become the veal cutlet man by now) were dearer this Tuesday than they were last Tuesday. Oh boy!

I looked around helplessly but Bill was there again.

"Oh the prices go back and forth, dear," he told her.

"Mostly forth, I'd say," she countered. But she stayed long enough to buy two pounds and to tell how her husband had had a meat shop in Saskatchewan.

"He'd been a good cutter in his day, but he'd passed on now," Bill recalled later. "And that was what she wanted to say but she didn't know how to say it."

In all it was a delightful evening. To work alongside people like Bill Wheten and Ken Taylor, a part-time butcher who works the rest of the time as a cook at CFB Comox, and to see the happiness they bring to the old people of Courtenay, was a joy.

Just after 6:30, I had longed desperately for the time to pass. Now, 90 minutes and 83 customers later, I wished the night would go on.

Chynoweth Vows He'll Go to Court

If Pat Ginnell had any thoughts about a nice, quiet training camp for his Victoria Cougars this season, he was mistaken.

Besides his normal workload as operator, general manager and coach of the Western Canada Hockey League Cougars, Ginnell has been embroiled in two controversies the past two weeks.

The first involved 17-year-old Tim Coulis. A midget player last year, Coulis' services are being fought over by the Cougars and Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior Series. Greyhounds have threatened court action but no settlement has been reached about Coulis.

The second controversy erupted this week when Victria defenceman Gordie Roberts left the junior club to sign a professional contract with New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association.

WCHL president Ed Chynoweth said Tuesday in Calgary that he was surprised and disappointed that the Whalers have signed Roberts, who turns 18 next month.

"We'll fight it," he said. "We were assured two weeks ago at a meeting with the World Hockey Association and the National Hockey League that league bylaws said no player could be signed unless he was drafted." Roberts was not drafted by either league.

Chynoweth added that if the WHA does not stand by its bylaws the case will end up in court.

"I detest this sort of thing. Nobody wants to go to court," he said, "but we might have to test the validity of our contract. Roberts signed a contract. His father witnessed it. We think that contract is valid even if Roberts is an American." Roberts was born in Detroit.

Chynoweth added he had spoken with Ben Hatskin, WHA chairman who operated a WCHL franchise for several years and was assured the signing would not be allowed.

The Roberts' controversy is the first since Mark Napier and John Tonelli, both 18, signed with WHA clubs although both had contracts with Toronto Marlboros of the OHA. Napier signed with Toronto Toros and Tonelli with Houston Aeros.

On Monday, however, the Marlies started legal proceedings in an attempt to prevent Tonelli from playing with the Aeros.

New England manager Jack Kelley said Tuesdy he doesn't consider the Roberts' singing in the same light as the signing of Napier and Tonelli.

"Whalers look on this situation entirely differently than the Napier and Tonelli incidents," he said. "Roberts is an American (born in Detroit) and only played one year in Canada. We think of him as having no part of any CAHA (Canadian Amateur Hockey Association) or junior agreement."

But Gordon Juckes, CAHA executive director, disagreed, saying that Roberts is still bound to the CAHA agreement.

In WCHL exhibition games Tuesday, New Westminster Bruins skated to a 5-2 win over Kamloops Chiefs and Regina Pats scored a 3-2 triumph over Brandon Wheat Kings.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

EDMONTON (CP) — Johnny Rodgers turned in a brilliant one-man display Tuesday night but narrowly failed in his bid to carry Montreal Alouettes to victory in a Canadian Football League game.

The Alouettes bowed 31-29 to Edmonton Eskimos when Dave Cutler kicked a 25-yard field goal, his third of the game, with three seconds remaining in the battle of the CFL conference leaders.

Edmonton opened a three-point lead over the second-place Saskatchewan Roughriders while Montreal remained two points ahead of Ottawa Rough Riders.

Rodgers dazzled a record crowd of 26,159 in newly-expanded Clarke Stadium by compiling 256 yards in total offence. The bulk of it came on 107 yards in four pass receptions and 126 yards—including a 101-yard touchdown burst—on five punt returns. One of the passes, a 25-yarder from Sonny Wade, also went for a touchdown.

Montreal also got a touchdown from Peter Dalla Riva on a five-yard pass from Wade with four seconds left in the first half. Don Sweet produced two 45-yard field goals and a 13-yarder that put Montreal in front with 2:20 remaining.

John Konihowski scored two touchdowns and George McGowan one for Edmonton, all on passes from Tom Wilkinson.

Cutler converted all three touchdowns and kicked two short field goals before the winner. He also got a single on a 61-yard field goal attempt moments before trying the 60-yarder which Rodgers turned into his touchdown romp.

Champagne Still on Ice For the A's

By The Associated Press

The champagne in Oakland's dressing room has been on ice for three days—and so have the A's.

Oakland's magic number for clinching baseball's American League West Division title has been at one and holding since Saturday night when they stretched their division lead to eight games. Since then Kansas City Royals have won three, the A's have lost three and the lead is down to five.

All of which leaves Oakland manager Alvin Dark unmoved.

"It would be silly to be concerned when you're five ahead with five to go," said Dark after the A's dropped a 4-3 decision to Minnesota Twins Tuesday night. "To tell you the truth I'm really not concerned about anything.

"But," Dark added, "we'd like to win it soon and get it over with."

Kansas City kept its hopes alive with a 4-0 triumph over Texas Rangers but Royals' manager Whitey Herzog smiled when asked about overtaking the A's.

"They'll never lose that many games in a row," Herzog said. "We've won 89 games and I thought in the winter that 89 would win it."

Elsewhere in the American League, Cleveland Indians edged Milwaukee Brewers 4-3, Chicago White Sox beat California Angels 5-4 and the Boston-New York and Detroit-Baltimore games were rained out. Boston remains four games ahead of Baltimore in the AL East.

Minnesota right-hander Bert Blyleven, 15-9, checked the A's on nine hits and struck out seven. Rod Carew doubled home a run for the Twins off Stan Bahnsen, 10-13, in the first, Steve Braun hit a sacrifice fly in the fifth and Dan Ford doubled home two runs in the eighth.

Bert Campaneris had a run-scoring single in the eighth for Oakland and Joe Rudi made it close with a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth.

Kansas City used four pitchers to two-hit the Rangers. Doug Bird started but left in the second inning after injuring his arm. Rookie Bob McClure came in and continued the no-hitter until Roy Smalley singled with one out in the seventh. Steve Mingori and Marty Pattin finished up.

Frank White hit a home run for the Royals and Amos Otis knocked in two runs with a double and sacrifice fly.

George Hendrick hit his 24th home run of the season on Bill Travers' first pitch in the ninth inning to give Cleveland its victory. Boog Powell knocked in the other three Indian runs with his 26th homer.

Ken Henderson's solo home run in the seventh inning won it for Chicago. The White Sox picked up their first four runs in the second with the help of run-scoring singles by Jerry Hairston and Chet Lemon. Lee Stanton had a two-run single for California.

NFL Player Ballot Expected Shortly

Times News Services

Negotiations over a National Football League contract broke off Tuesday in Chicago and the union said management's latest offer will be presented to players for a vote, probably Thursday.

The major obstacles in the two days of bargaining were elimination of the Rozelle rule and impartial arbitration on non-injury grievances, two proposals the owners have rejected.

Other player issues include preseason pay, representation on the pension board and squad size.

The Rozelle rule, named after NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, requires that a club acquiring a player who has played out his option must satisfactorily compensate his former club.

The management offer, coming as a result of a strike by five clubs last week, offered modifications of the Rozelle rule, set minimum saimum $31,500 for the Super

SPORT SHORTS

The Soviet Union dominated the second half and swamped Canada 103-52 Tuesday night in an opening-round game at the women's world basketball championships in Bogota, Colombia.

Canada trailed by 17 points at the half, but the Soviet Union had 54-20 edge in the lop-sided second half. Carol Turney of Chilliwack with 14 points, and Sheila Striker of Vancouver, with 11, topped the Canadian scorers.

Bruce Forbes, executive director of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, lashed out Tuesday at reports from Montreal that the RCGA was trying to pull out of its Canadian Open commitments to that city.

The Open is scheduled to be played in Montreal in 1978 and 1980 before taking up permanent residency at the refurbished Glen Abbey layout in Oakville, 20 miles west of here.

Forbes said the implication that the RCGA is trying to pull the Canadian Open out of Montreal is not true.

"We just haven't had a Montreal club with the necessary facilities come forward and say they want to host the tournament in 1978."

Defending champion West Germany will play in the opening match of the 1978 World Cup soccer finals in the Argentine capital of Buenos Aires, it was announced Tuesday.

Big Win for the Caps But Not for Canucks

By The Canadian Press

The sophomore Washington Capitals upset the Adams Division champion Buffalo Sabres 3-1 in National Hockey League pre-season action Tuesday night and manager-coach Milt Schmidt credits the intense competition for jobs on the Washington roster.

The Capitals used three goalies, all rookies, in the contest at London, Ont.

"Those three guys really played well for us," said Schmidt. "Not a spot on this team is set and we have to take another look at the goalies."

Other NHL exhibition action Tuesday saw Pittsburgh Penguins beat New York Islanders 5-1 while Montreal Canadiens beat the Canucks 5-2 at Vancouver.

The Capitals won only eight of 80 games in 1974-75, their first NHL season.

Derek Smith opened the scoring for Buffalo in the second period but Washington's Mike Marson tied it just 18 seconds later.

Rookie Brian Kinsella scored for the Capitals midway in the final period and Bob Gryp added an empty-net goal in the final minute.

At Uniondale, N.Y., the Penguins gained some revenge over the Islanders who knocked Pittsburgh out of the playoffs last season. Lowell McDonald scored two goals to lead the Pittsburgh victory.

The Vancouver game drew 15,570 fans.

Garry Monahan of the Canucks suffered a severe gash to his left leg in the second period when hit by a skate during a goalmouth collision. He was taken from the ice on a stretcher and was to undergo surgery.

Boxers Advance

Strikers Bob Bolitho and George Pakos set the pace with two goals each as Canadian champion London Boxing Club blanked Nanaimo City 5-0 Tuesday before about 350 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

The victory put Boxers into the Vancouver Island Soccer League's McGavin Cup final against Gorge Molsons at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 30 on the same turf.

Three Teams Still Perfect

Spectrum, Norfolk House and Oak Bay all retained their perfect records in the Victoria High School Girls' Field Hockey League Tuesday with shutout victories.

Spectrum trimmed Parkland 6-0 while Norfolk House trounced Claremont 12-0 and Oak Bay defeated Mt. Douglas 2-0. The three winning teams now have 3-0 records in league play.

In other games, Dunsmuir and Victoria High School played to a 0-0 tie and St. Margarets defeated Belmont 7-0.

Lancaster Decides 15 Seasons Enough

REGINA (CP) — After 15 years in the Canadian Football League, including one Grey Cup victory, a record 268 touchdown passes and a record 39,751 yards gained passing, Ron Lancaster had decided to quit.

In a brief interview Tuesday, the 36-year-old quarterback, now in his 13th year with Saskatchewan Roughriders, confirmed he has firmly decided to leave the playing-field at the end of this season.

Beyond that, he said, "I don't have any plans." He has made no decision on seeking a coaching job or leaving the football world entirely — "everything's open."

It was a decision long in the making. For two years, there have been continual rumors of his imminent departure, but Lancaster only recently gave the Riders the official word.

Although bothered this month with a knee injury, Lancaster said it was not a factor in his retirement decision. He declined to add any further statement "at this time."

Rider general manager Ken Preston, who has directed the club for 18 years, said he would not try to persuade Lancaster to change his mind.

"If he thinks he's capable, we'd be glad to have him, but I think we'll leave it up to him to make the decision.

"I wouldn't want to try to talk any football player out of retiring because once they've decided to retire, they've lost their love of the game and I don't think they're usually much good after that."

So far, Preston said, no thought has been given to whether any other position with the club could be offered to Lancaster, who has been acting as an assistant coach.

Preparations are already underway, however, to find a successor to him.

"We have a couple of good boys on our negotiation list that we don't want to divulge," said Preston. Also available is back-up quarterback Randy Mattingly, a 25-year-old now in his second year with the team.

Preston said Mattingly has had little opportunity to show his ability as a quarterback and almost certainly would not get a full-scale test in the rest of this season — "Every game means too much to us to go with anything but the best."

The five-foot, 10-inch 190-pound quarterback has confronted better passers and been up against many opposing quarterbacks who provide a running threat he does not.

His career passing records, which also cover the two years he spent in Ottawa before coming here, include a record 318 interceptions suffered, about 12 for every 100 completions.

But Lancaster has been dominant in play-caling, acquiring through experience the ability to catch a defence off guard with an unexpected play, to notice and exploit a weak spot, and to manoeuvre the defensive squad into predictable responses.

His knack of staging dramatic comebacks in the dying moments of a game has led to local fans almost expecting what is called here the "two-minute miracles."

During his years with Riders, the team has won 126 games, lost 70 and tied seven. They made the Grey Cup contest four times.

Fishing Gods Arrange A Small Humility Lesson

Fishermen's gods are a perverse lot, indeed.

There is no over-all consistency, no matter how skilled an angler you are, in the success.

But perhaps this is what makes it interesting.

Two weekends ago, I was on a lake about 3,000 feet up in the coast range inland from Powell River. The knife-edged mountains surrounding the lake were still clad in snowfields from last winter, providing a welcome change of scene from the starkness of a debris-cluttered reservoir encountered on the way in at a lower elevation.

There, in that ice-cold water, I found the best trout fishing of my life.

After paddling the canoe nearly to the end of its mile-and-a-half length, I crossed into what was probably an almost perpetual shadow thrown by a steep northward-facing cliff.

The day was hot and the shadow looked "fishy" despite the lack of surface signs.

It was. I began taking cutthroat from 10 to 14 inches long with every second or third cast of a nymph fly. Because the drive back was so long and hot, all were released.

Trout landed on a fly are relatively easy to release unharmed because the hook is invariably lodged in a thin portion of the mouth. In contrast, lure and bait-caught fish always seem to have the hooks halfway down their throats.

Altogether it was a fishing experience of a lifetime and the hard paddle back against a stiff wind didn't lessen the memories.

Then came this past Monday.

In the process of breaking in some new boots on the trail around Spectacle Lake on the Malahat, I noticed some telltale dimples on the water and later heard the splashes of some fairly-large trout breaking water.

After hiking back to the truck to grab my spin-casting outfit and tackle box, I carefully positioned myself on a point of marshy ground nearest what seemed to be a centre of feeding activity.

Guess what?

For two hours I flogged the water with every lure in the box with every intention this time of keeping a few while trout boiled the surface mere yards away.

In that time I received only one half-hearted strike for my efforts.

To make matters worse, the newest lure in my tackle box is now irretrievably attached to some unyeilding object on the bottom of the lake.

No, I'm not bitter.

But the contrast between the two occasions, coming so close together, was a little unnerving.

Maybe those gods that govern fishing were trying to teach a lesson to someone who gloated a bit too much over that earlier success.

Seattle Eyeing Giants

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Toronto Giants, Seattle White Sox, Chicago A's. Those are strange sounding names but they are some of the combinations that could be occupying the thinking of major-league baseball owners assembled here today.

The owners will hear a report from the franchise committee created 10 months ago to deal with a multitude of the game's problems. Among those headaches are the overcrowded baseball population of the San Francisco-Oakland bay area with two clubs battling for attention from a section that seems able to support only one.

The solution, it would appear, would be to move one of the teams. But it is not all that simple. There are leases involved and breaking them could mean litigation, a problem baseball officials are all too familiar with in Seattle.

There was this team called the Pilots, who departed Seattle in 1970 after one season to become the Milwaukee Brewers. That left some unhappy people in Seattle and they initiated an anti-trust suit which is still pending.

The folks there would gladly forget the whole thing, provided baseball supplies the city with another team for 1976.

A Seattle group has offered $15 million for the Giants, whom Horace Stoneham wouldn't mind selling. But Stoneham's price for the club and related real estate holdings has been quoted between $16-$18 million.

Another solution for Seattle would be a northwestward move of the financially-troubled Chicago White Sox, another for sale franchise. That would allow Charles O. Finley to transfer Oakland A's to Chicago and leave the bay area to Stoneham and the Giants, an intriguing solution.

Students Getting a Chance To Blow Their Own Whistles

SCHOOL SPORTS

Memo to high school physical education teachers and coaches:

Be careful: the kid you expel from class this afternoon may be the referee in your volleyball game tonight.

To solve what it describes as "the acute problem of the lack of trained officials for high school sport," the B.C. Federation of School Athletic Associations (BCFSAA) is training students to become referees.

Volleyball official's clinics have already been held for 60 students in Victoria, conducted by Dave Turkington, district co-ordinator of physical education and recreation, and Ron Greene, volleyball coach at Victoria "Y". The students now are writing tests and being rated on their work as officials.

Those who pass will be certified to handle elementary junior and senior high school games and some are already refereeing in a senior high school girls' "B" league.

They'll also be able to work toward provincial ratings, enabling them to officiate games outside the schools.

A basketball clinic is planned for Victoria as soon as the BCFSAA makes audio-visual material available from Vancouver.

Student referees have been used before but this marks the first full-scale effort to certify them and the high schools are to be commended. Any move that gives the youngsters more control of their own games is a good one.

CHALKDUST — Victoria will host provincial high school championships in three sports between now and next spring. They are swimming Dec. 5-6, boys' curling Feb. 12-14 and spring rugby May 7-8. Other championship dates: badminton, Nov. 27-30 at Vancouver; boys' "AA" basketball, March 17-20 at Vancouver; boys' "A" basketball, March 11-13 at Hope; girls "AA" basketball, March 10-13 at Vancouver; girls' "A" basketball, March 4-6 at Winfield; bowling, May 8 at Vancouver; cross-country, Nov. 29 at Nelson; girls' field hockey, Oct. 30-Nov. 1, Salmon Arm; football, Nov. 26 at Vancouver; golf, June 5-6, North Vancouver; fall rugby, Oct. 22-25 at Burnaby; fall seven-a-side rugby, Oct. 17-18 at Williams Lake and 100-Mile House; spring seven-a-side rugby, April 23-24 at Delta; track and field, June 4-5 at Kelowna; girls' "AA" volleyball, Nov. 27-29 at Kamloops; girls "A" volleyball, Nov. 20-22 at 100 Mile House; boys' volleyball, Dec. 4-6 at Prince Rupert; wrestling, Feb. 27-28 at Vancouver; tennis, June 4-6 at Vancouver.

The fourth school sports draw sponsored by the B.C. Federation of School Athletic Associations is under way and runs to Nov. 14. Students sell the tickets with 50 to 75 per cent of the proceeds going directly to participating schools. First prize is $5,000 with three prizes of $1,000. Tickets are $1 each . . . UBC will go ahead with construction of its new indoor swimming pool. The school's board of governors held up approval of the $5.2 million aquatic centre last July but gave it the go-ahead recently after the cost was trimmed to $4.7 million . . . The Ontario University Athletic Association has given University of Windsor Lancers the green light to play football despite a ruling by the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union that quarterback Dave Pickett had used up all his eligibility. Efforts are under way to work out a compromise between the QUAA and CIAU . . . University of Western Ontario Mustangs, meanwhile, conceded a forfeit loss to Windsor when Windsor athletic director Bob Barney discovered his school had used an ex-professional. Defensive end Paul Patterson, it turned out, played a season each with B.C. Lions and Montreal Alouettes. Western lost the game anyway, 34-17.

LEO CAHILL TO COACH PORTLAND?

MEMPHIS (AP) — The Commercial Appeal says Leo Cahill, former general manager of Memphis Southmen and Toronto Argos, is reported to be considering an offer to accept the head coaching job with Portland Thunder of the World Football League.

The post has been available since Portland general manager Bob Brodhead fired Greg Barton three weeks ago. Brodhead has been serving as interim head coach.

ROBINSON RETURNING

CLEVELAND (AP) — Frank Robinson, major league baseball's first black manager, will manage Cleveland Indians for a second year. Phil Seghi, general manager of the American League team, made the announcement Tuesday. Robinson said recently he would like to return as manager but without his playing role. He was active as designated hitter early in the current season, but he dropped out under a combination of a muscle injury and improved hitting by other Indians.

Island players on the President's XV are Mick Eckhardt of James Bay, Ken Wilke of UVic, Gillie Greig and Jim Wenman of Oak Bay Wanderers and Wes Thomas of Cowichan. Alan Rees of UVic and Steve Thompson of Castaways are reserves.

More Rules for Golfers To Study Between Rounds

FAR HILLS, N.J. (AP)—Neither wind nor water nor over-indulgent caddies will stay a rules-minded duffer from the righteous completion of his appointed rounds, according to the United States Golf Association.

The USGA has released a list of international rule changes and amendments recommended at St. Andrews, Scotland, last May at the USGA-Royal and Ancient Golf Club Rules Conference. The conference is held every four years to consider various suggestions and proposals for rule changes, most coming about as a result of actual situations which exposed minor weaknesses or omissions in the rule book.

Among the new rules, effective Jan. 1, 1976, is one stipulating that a player's caddie no longer will be allowed "on or close to an extension of the line of putt behind the ball."

Another change provides that players will no longer be disqualified in stroke play if a ball is lifted, played out from elsewhere and correction is not made. Under the new code, if a ball is moved illegally, a penlty of one stroke is incurred and the ball must be replaced.

The player receives an additional two-stroke penalty if the ball is not replaced and played out from another locatin.

This rule change also features four new sub-clauses concerning extenuating circumstances. They cover everything from the movement of the ball by an "outside agency," last balls and balls resting against the flagstick.

As regards the first, neither wind nor water qualify as an outside agency, so if a ball at rest is relocated by either, that's your tough luck.

A ball isn't lost until you've spent five fruitless minutes searching for it—plus two other good reasons. If a ball resting gainst the flagstick gets hustled away from the hole as the pole is removed, it gets placed on the lip of the cup without penalty.

CARIBOUS CLOSE TO CHAMPIONSHIP

QUEBEC (CP) — Travis Cook scored four goals, three during a five-goal rally in the third period, as Quebec Caribous defeated Montreal Quebecois, 10-8, Tuesday night to take a 3-0 lead in their best-of-seven National Lacrosse League final series.

The Caribous, fourth-place finishers in the six-team league, have a chance to win the Nations Cup Thursday night.

Pat Differ and John MacDonald with two each, Bruce Murdock and Jim Miller were the other Quebec scorers before 10,718 fans.

The Caribous led 4-3 after the first period but Montreal outscored them 4-1 in the middle session.

Montreal goaltender Ernie Mitchell faced 44 shots, including 18 in the final 20 minutes. The Quebecois, second-place finishers during regular-season play, had 42 shots at Caribous netminder Larry Smeltzer.

39.1 from Victoria to Campbell River and back. That's the mileage C-FAX's Barry Kennard got on a Fiat 128 sedan driving in the Mileage Challenge.

Reward Offered for Model Return

A $100 reward, with no questions asked, is being offered for the return of a ship's model stolen from the Princess Mary Restaurant.

The three-foot model of the tug, Island Sovereign, was stolen between 6 and 10:30 p.m. on Sept. 10.

For years the model had a place of honor in the office of the late Harold Elworthy, who built a tugboat empire in his lifetime.

His son, Don, said because of its historical and sentimental significance it is impossible to put a price tag on the model.

"At first we thought it was a practical joke," Elworthy said. "We would love to have it back and forget the whole thing but we're just afraid someone else liked it too."

Elworthy said more than one person must have been involved because the model was removed from a glass case, the sides of which would automatically go down once the lid was removed. The thieves left the case intact and in place.

The Island Sovereign, now named the Seaspan Sovereign, is still in service on this coast.

Built as a United States army tug during the Second World War, the 120-foot tug was salvaged by the late Harold Elworthy's company after she was shipwrecked in the Seymour Narrows in the late 1940s.

Elworthy had her brought back into shape, later replacing her engines with more powerful 24,000 horsepower ones.

A Mr. Rogers, a Canadian Pacific Railway draftsman, was paid $1,000 by Elworthy to make the model 20 years ago.

Scaled down from the original plans, the model has a black hull, red decks and white superstructure.

And, as Elworthy's son puts it, the model is so well-known that, just like a valuable painting or museum piece, the thieves will be unable to sell or display it without it being recognized.

Women Get Own Paper

The Island Woman, a newspaper tabloid with a press run of 25,000, went on sale today at Greater Victoria newsstands.

Editor Shirley Guth said the weekly tabloid will also be dropped into random mailboxes. She promises a candid variety of women's news and views in its 12 pages.

The tabloid was put out with a skeleton staff of three, drawing heavily from freelance submissions, she said, and it includes coverage of news events related specifically to women, consumer advice, as well as profiles of successful women in local business.

LIBRARY BOARD SHAVES $17,000

The Greater Victoria Public Library Board decided Tuesday afternoon to cut library expenses by $16,975 after learning of a $17,000 budget deficit.

Finance committee chairman William Eng told the board the library system had originally set the 1975 budget on the assumption it would receive a $120,000 grant from the provincial government.

"We ultimately received $90,000 from the B.C. government, which equals a shortfall of $30,000; plus shortfalls in other income areas such as fines, resulted in the $17,000 deficit," Eng explained.

The board will make up the deficit by cutting library material expenses by $5,500, furniture expenses by $9,560 and building repairs and maintenance expenses by $1,915.

In other business, the board approved library director Donald Miller's proposal for a one-year contract for rental of storage for framed art reproductions.

Rental costs, said Miller, will be $115 a month for 800 square feet.

Only Ald. Mel Couvelier, Saanich representative on the board, opposed the move.

"It seems rather ridiculous to rent space to store reproductions when we had established months ago that the policy of loaning reproductions to the public be discontinued," Couvelier said.

But Miller said storage space would also be used for about 30,000 books destined for the new McClung library in Saanich.

"These books," Miller said, "are presently stacked all over the aisles at the library."

The board will ask the five municipal councils to give directors the legal right to sell the reproductions.

Safeguard System Useless

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The House of Representatives defence appropriations subcommittee has recommended that the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile defence system be closed down, well-informed government sources said Tuesday.

The sources said the subcommittee has informed its parent House appropriations committee that 100 radar-directed Safeguard missiles provide little protection for the Grand Forks, N.D. Minuteman missile field.

Land Crisis Termed Myth

TORONTO (CP) — A unpublished study by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. says there is no truth to the complaint of land shortages made by the housing and development industry.

"The real message behind the claim that originates from these experts, that 'the land shortage'' causes current house or land prices, is never mind the prices, the problem is future land supply,' " says Peter Spurr, of CMHC's land assembly and new communities division and author of the study.

The study, completed a year ago, says about 140 large land development companies account for 75 per cent of lot production in metropolitan areas across Canada.

The study, circulated within CMHC and to some outside experts, blames the trend to larger land developers on Governmetn housing policies since the Second World War.

Spurr says the smaller builder "is an anachronism." The giant metropolitan land developers "are now consolidating their position by buying up their competition and the suppliers and materials in their production processes" he adds.

However, he attacks the "widely-held notion that large developer-landlords commit the worst excesses in ripping off their tenants, "saying that individuals and private companies who invest privately in real estate get a much higher return than developers.

Tiny Gain in Production Level Follows Year-Long Decline

OTTAWA (CP) — The level of production in the economy increased during July because of an improved performance in the service industries and in some goods-producing industries, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

The index of real domestic product — a measure of production that allows for the effects of price increases — was up one-half of one per cent in July.

The index had declined seven-tenths of one per cent from 1974 levels during the first three months of this year, but stabilized during the second quarter.

Statistics Canada says it has revised its agriculture output index back to January to reflect updated crop and livestock estimates.

In the service industries, real output rose in both retail and wholesale trade. Motor vehicle dealers and department stores had the strongest gains.

In the goods-producing sector, most of the increase in production originated with forestry and construction. Residential construction improved for a third successive month after 11 consecutive monthly declines.

Durable goods output was 1.6 per cent higher during July this year than in the comparable month a year ago because of increased output of motor vehicles and of iron and steel. Motor vehicle production in July was at a higher level than in the corresponding 1974 month for the first time this year.

As reported earlier, the index of industrial production, which measures output by the mining, manufacturing and utilities sectors, declined two-tenths of one per cent during July. The corresponding U.S. index rose one-half of one per cent in July and a further 1.3 per cent during August.

Industrial production makes up about 30 per cent of real domestic product.

So far this year, production by Canadian industrial companies is 5.8 per cent below the year-earlier level. Industrial output in the United States declined 11 per cent from year-earlier levels during the first seven months this year, Statistics Canada says.

LABOR INCOME UP IN JULY

OTTAWA (CP) — The total income paid to labor groups, made up primarily of wages and salaries, rose 2.2 per cent during July to $7.32 billion from $7.16 billion in June, Statistics Canada said Tuesday.

The figures are adjusted for seasonal variations.

Wages and salaries paid employees in service industries rose 4.2 per cent to $1.72 billion in July. At the same time, income for employees in goods-producing industries dropped one per cent to $1.57 billion, partly because of the impact of industrial disputes in forestry.

Lump sum cost-of-living payments made to employees of some provincial governfents were the main reason for the higher total income paid to service industries.

Stanfield Wants Turner 'Solution'

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has called on former finance minister John Turner to declare publicly what steps he thinks are needed to solve the country's economic problems.

Turner "owes the country an explanation, an early declaration of what actions he thinks are appropriate to deal with our economic mess," Stanfield said Tuesday in a speech prepared for the Toronto Junior Board of Trade.

He said Turner, who resigned the finance portfolio Sept. 10, has an obligation to state what course a new finance minister should follow to rescue the country from continuing high inflation and unemployment.

Turner, who had been considered a top contender to succeed Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, said he quit to spend more time with his family and to return to private law practice.

In a speech tinged with gloom about the country's economic problems, Stanfield said Canada "would be in a lot better shape today" if the country had accepted his appeal during the July, 1974, federal election campaign for wage and price controls.

"I remain convinced that if such a program had been undertaken in 1974 — while there certainly would have been some rough times putting it in place — we would be in a lot better shape today."

He said the proposal, for a 90-day wage-price freeze followed by temporary controls, would have broken the fever of confrontation which saw government, business and labor blaming one another for the country's economic problems.

Instead, the voters rejected the wage-price policy by returning Trudeau the Commons majority he lost in 1972. After three election losses, Stanfield is retiring in February as Progressive Conservative leader.

He said it was too simple to blame big wage settlements to organized labor for the current 11-per-cent rate of inflation.

He said businessmen should instead look at the country's international trade policy which, according to a July report of the Economic Council of Canada, has no clear goals for development of foreign trade.

"Wage settlements presumably are a factor in our current difficulties," he said, "but it is not very helpful for business to blame labor and thereby avoid facing the hard questions — questions which have been swept under the rug."

He said business, labor and government, have been playing the "blame game," by shouting abuse at each other over the economy.

Stanfield said businessmen had to "quit faking it" by seeking scapegoats for economic problems. He said there is an urgent need for three-way co-operation.

Chinese Charged

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Six young Chinese men were charged Tuesday with the colony's biggest armed robbery, a $1.36-million heist. The men, aged between 24 and 27, all were hooded when they were taken into court under police escort. They were remanded in custody until Saturday. Detectives still are looking for more accomplices to the Aug. 5 robbery, in which about 10 men held up two bank vehicles.

'Can't Afford' Pensions at 60—Lalonde

REGINA (CP) — The government can't afford to make old-age pensions available to everyone at age 60, Health Minister Marc Lalonde said.

Even if it could, he told the National Pensioners' and Senior Citizens' Federation, the move would cause an adverse effect on private companies.

"This action would set up a chain reaction in demanding similar provisions under the Canada Pension Plan and under private pensions," he said.

"Costs would rise significantly not only for old-age security but also under the Canada Pension Plan and the Quebec Pension Plan, and in the private sector."

He estimated the federal cost of lowering the pension age to 60 from 65 at $1.3 billion annually.

"Even if such large amounts of money were available, they would be better directed towards the most needy groups and not given across the board to everyone over 60," he said.

"We have to look after the most pressing requirements of our society first."

The federation subsequently modified but maintained proposals to increase old-age pensions and to lower the eligibility age for the pensions.

In a resolution Tuesday, the federation said the old-age pension should be raised to $150 a month from $129.28 and the income supplement for needy pensioners should be increased 50 per cent. Another resolution said the eligibility age should be progressively lowered to age 60 from 65.

Federation president J. L. Lerette of Toronto said the resolutions modified previous federation policy that called for a $200 pension and a lowering of the eligibility age to 60 in one step.

On the other hand, the proposed increase in the maximum income supplement was new.

"We've always worked (before) on the basis of increasing the basic pension.

"Lalonde has strong arguments that the money should be given to those who need it most, but it's not fair to leave behind those who don't qualify for the supplement."

Joe Phelps, president of the Saskatchewan senior citizens' group, Action Now, said in an interview he would have been more convinced of Lalonde's arguments if the minister had thought about costs when MPs' salaries were raised.

"He talks one way and acts another. His actions are so loud that I can't hear him."

ASTHMA FROM HAY?

WINNIPEG (CP) — Farmers suffering asthmatic symptoms may actually be the victims of an illness caused by inhaling a spore common in mouldy hay or straw, the Manitoba department of health said Tuesday.

The department said in a statement that continued wet weather during the last several weeks has created a potential health hazard to farmers exposed to the mould spores.

The department urged farmers with symptoms similar to asthma to report to their doctors.

Pay Inquiry Ends

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta Supreme Court concluded Tuesday an inquiry into the question of equal pay for nursing aides and nursing orderlies stemming from a 1973 complaint to the Alberta Human Rights Commission.

Mr. Justice David McDonald said he will try to deliver a decision within a matter of weeks.

In 1974, a one-man board of inquiry ruled the pay-discrimination complaint by seven Royal Alexandra Hospital nursing aides was justified and recommended equalizing wages with those of male orderlies.

Prisoners Still Sit

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prisoners at Stony Mountain Penitentiary remained locked in cells Tuesday in the second day of a "no work demonstration" to protest a variety of prison regulations and programs.

Russ McGill, assistant director of organization and administration, said a short meeting Tuesday between prison officials and representatives of the 450 prisoners failed to settle the dispute.

He said the prisoners were allowed outside cells for meals only.

Jail Renovated

EDMONTON (CP) — Renovations to "B" block at Fort Saskatchewan Correctional Institution, part of a $380,000 improvements budget, have been completed, said a news release from the Alberta solicitor general's department Tuesday.

"These renovations . . . provide much better security, give us the opportunity to better separate remand from sentenced inmates, and should lessen tension among inmates," said Bob King, director of correctional services for the department.

Improvements to the smaller bloack "A" at the institution, 15 miles east of Edmonton, is scheduled to begin immediately, the release said.

The jail holds 420 inmates.

Migration Reversal Policy Studied

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadians and immigrants alike would be given incentives to locate in sparsely settled areas under a new population policy being considered by the federal government.

Robert Andras, federal minister of manpower and immigration, outlined the concept in a brief interview Tuesday after meeting with Alberta Manpower Minister Bert Hohol on the province's role in forming the policy.

The new national demographic policy "could affect just about every province and policy you can think of . . . transportation, industrial strategy and urban development," said Andras.

He said he hoped a national consensus on the policy would be reached in about two years after consultation with the provinces, which have been asked to appoint a "lead" minister to take part in the talks.

The minister said the government wants to reverse the trend of migration to major cities such as Toronto and Montreal by both immigrants and the native Canadian population.

A HOT TIME IN THE OLD MOUNTAIN . . .

SEATTLE (AP) — University of Washington scientists confirmed Tuesday that Mt. Baker, northwest Washington's steamy volcano, is the hottest thing going in the Cascade mountain range.

Steam from vents around Sherman Crater has been measured as high as 103 degrees Celsius. The boiling point of water at the same altitude is 89 degrees. The measurement also is the hottest in the Cascade range this century.

Gun Sales Hit a Record

TORONTO (CP) — Rifle and shotgun sales are at record levels this season in all provinces except British Columbia, despite shorter hunting seasons in some areas and the possibility of stricter gun control legislation.

Max Winkler, gun manager for Harkley and Haywood Ltd., Vancouver, said anti-gun campaigns, big labor problems and inflation account for lower sales in British Columbia.

In contrast, David Wilson, president of Peterborough Guns Ltd., Peterborough, Ont., which distributes most major lines throughout Canada, said sales are up about 40 per cent this year.

He said that, with inflation and less favorable exchange rates for the Canadian dollar, U.S. and Canadian lines such as Remington, Winchester and Savage are selling better than higher-priced European-built guns.

Ralph McFadden, sporting goods manager for C. H. Howden and Co. Ltd., London, Ont., said sales are up 70 per cent. The most popular models are .308 and .30-06-calibre rifles and 12-gauge pump or semi-automatic shotguns, he said.

D. A. McCall, president of Winchester-Western (Canada) Ltd., Cobourg, Ont., said sales have increased despite competition from foreign markets which subsidize some exports.

Mary de Carlo, general manager of Lakefield Arms Ltd., Lakefield, Ont., said the company is selling all it produces but that demand is so heavy there has beeen a shortage of parts.

G. C. Roy, assistant purchasing manager of Maison d'Armes a Feux Inc., Quebec City, said the company is running out of stock. He said he thinks increased demand for guns is due to hunters buying new models rather than more people taking up hunting.

Glenn Gibbs, an assistant manager for Outdoor Stores Ltd., Toronto, said sales are good, especially high-powered, centre-fire guns for deer and moose.

U.S. MD Walkout May Happen Here

OTTAWA (CP) — A future walkout by Canadian doctors over medical malpractice insurance is possible, an insurance company executive said Tuesday at a conference on health and the law.

Doctors in California and New York went on strike last summer protesting the fact they could not get malpractice insurance. U.S. companies had stopped issuing policies because of court settlements of more than $1 million against doctors.

"We don;t have an active malpractice insurance problem in Canada now but the U.S. situation is a crystal ball for what could happen here," said F. P. Kendrick, senior vice-president and director of Marsh and McLennan Limited of Toronto.

Kendrick blamed the "Marcus Welby syndrome" — television doctor programs — and a desire to get rich quick on the steadily rising rate of malpractice suits against doctors in Canada.

"People see these shows and they expect instant cures. When they don't get these cures and they read about people in the U.S. getting million-dollar malpractice settlements, they figure they should take action against their own doctor," he said.

In 1970, 80 writs were served but by June of this year 126 writs already had been served.

However, J. P. S. McLaren, dean of the faculty of law at the University of Calgary, said many provinces do not give adequate protection to patients who have been victims of a doctor's negligence.

"Often a doctor will make a mistake — say leave a swab in the abdomen — and the situation won't come to light for several years. By that time the statute of limitations has come into effect and the person has no legal recourse."

Special, because the single whiskies are not shocked by being dumped together at once. We let them rest quietly awhile, so that the blend will have greater uniformity and more dependable consistency.

In this Scottish city, on the banks of the River Tay, nothing much has changed. The castle is still there, and every year, from January to December, when the air is chill and pure and the water is cold, the people of Perth make Dewar's Scotch Whisky.

Son Tommy Dewar looked for new markets at the 1885 Brewer's Show and used a bagpipe to entertain. (The first commercial use of music?)

Watershed Compromise Hailed

Environmentalists and forest company representatives in B.C. have set up a joint committee to discuss resource issues and have come to an agreement on management of watersheds.

It's the first time the two groups have come together for talks on a permanent basis and members of the committee expressed enthusiasm at the group's ability to reach a compromise.

"Everybody was getting a little tired of yelling at one another through the newspapers," said Ed Mankelow, B.C. Wildlife Federation past-president.

Both he and MacMillan Bloedel chief forester Grant Ainscough said the importance of the watershed agreement was that for the first time both groups were trying to understand each other's position and reach an effective compromise.

The committee, set up last year at the encouragement of the Council of Forest Industries (representing B.C.'s major forest companies), includes a variety of environmental and recreation groups, government representatives and forestry union people.

Their statement on watersheds was presented Tuesday to the cabinet's Environment and Land-Use Committee which expressed pleasure at seeing both sides working together for the first time.

The main points of the watershed statement were:

—Resource inventories be made to insure good management.

—Pesticides be used only when there is no reasonable alternative.

—Slash fires only be used for specific purposes.

—Specific analysis be made to determine in each area whether logging should be permitted.

The government will now examine the proposals for use in the future and the committee will discuss further resource management planning.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 22-year-old Victorian who was told his lifestyle must change has two months in jail to think about new directions.

Loyd Victor Harris, no fixed address, pleaded guilty Sept. 15 to theft of a $350 ring from a Sooke home where he was staying.

He appeared Tuesday in provincial court for pre-sentence report, with a record of theft and false pretences starting in 1971.

"I'm not convinced imprisonment will work a major change. The change has got to come from within, from yourself," said Judge D. K. McAdam.

The jail environment might help Harris decide there is a better way of life, the judge said.

The report by probation officer Edward Stanton said Harris wants to join the armed forces to get the leadership and discipline he didn't learn at home.

Russell Irving Bannister, 26, of 3929 Glanford, received one month in jail after pleading guilty to an April 20 Vancouver charged of fraud. He will serve the term concurrent to an earlier sentence ending Nov. 10.

Bannister was charged after receiving $500 for a private basement remodelling job he didn't do.

Legal Aid duty counsel Bill McCallum told Judge McAdam Bannister worked as a trusty while a city jail inmate, regularly helping with meals and laundry. A longer jail term would send him to Wilkinson Road, he said.

"There really should be a consecutive jail sentence imposed," said McAdam. "The only thing that's persuading me to do anything different is the favorable report on your behavior in custody."

Bannister will also reimburse the Vancouver party. He was placed on a year's probation.

David Leslie Dunphy, 18, no fixed address, was jailed 30 days after pleading guilty to possession of known stolen goods. He had the merchandise between Sept. 8 and 19 and pawned it in Victoria stores.

Pawned items — worth $840.50 — were a quartz watch, two bicyles and a calculator.

Jean Baptiste Gaudrealt, 18, staying with friends at 1333 Miles, was picked up by police after prowling near parked cars in the 1300-block Esquimalt early Tuesday. He had pulled an 8-track tape machine from inside a car.

Gaudreault told police his tape deck had been stolen and he decided to steal one back. He has a record including shoplifting and marijuana possession.

A man who told the court he is living in his car while job-hunting received a three-month suspended sentence for shoplifting and told to obtain housing and work.

Bradley Gould, 17, was apprehended Friday outside Woolco, wearing a leather jacket he had stolen from the store.

"I really needed that money. I was going to take it back, say I had bought it and get money back," said Gould.

A man who pleaded guilty to impaired driving was sentenced to 21 days after police arrested him Monday and found his blood alcohol level twice the legal limit.

Robert David Young, 18, of 1345 Pandora, is also prohibited from driving for four months.

Also in traffic court, James Harold Durose, 36, of 589 Heatherly, was fined $400 for impaired driving and is barred from driving for 30 days.

Daniel Guy Mercier, 19, of HMCS Saskatchewan, was fined $75 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident after he collided at slow speed with a parked car July 19.

On Monday John Frederick Ledrew, 79, of 605 Douglas, was fined $25 after pleading guilty to theft of a $2 wallet from Simpsons-Sears.

He was arrested immediately after the incident, and police found $251 in his pocket.

"I have to pay rent and live on that for a month," he told the court, saying he had just cashed his pension cheque.

Newman H. B. Schipshorst, 18, of 1034 Sutlej, was picked up June 19 driving south on Cook at Leonard three weeks after receiving a three-month licence suspension for a bad driving record.

Police said Schipshorst told them he was tired of not being able to drive.

Also in traffic court, Donald Watkins Ball, 21, of 1063 Foul Bay, pleaded guilty to impaired driving and was fined $400.

Negotiate on Safety, Workers Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — Workers should not be forced to choose between their lives and their jobs, a Canadian Labor Congress conference on health and safety was told.

Jeanne Stellman of New York, a technical consultant for an international union, urged delegates to negotiate adequate standards of protection with employers who too often place profits above prudence.

In a strongly-worded criticism of the safety policies of a number of large corporations, Stellman rejected outright the notion that some persons must toil under dangerous working conditions because corrective action seems impossible.

"For too long people have been led to believe that there is no choice," she said.

Stellman, who works for the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, underlined her remarks with a history of recent restrictions on polyvinyl chloride in the United States.

Polyvinyl chloride is a widely-used plastic that has been linked with a form of cancer of the liver.

Stellman accused the industry of ignoring scientific studies of the effects of the plastic and resisting efforts to limit the exposure of their workers.

"We're just touching the surface of how many will be dying from this always-fatal disease," she said of the form of liver cancer.

"I don't think we can justify such laxness, such criminal laxness, in any way."

She also noted that the industry finally adopted strict standards, with prodding from the U.S. federal government, after the labor movement challenged company claims that new standards would cost workers their jobs.

Generally, Stellman said the brunt of the fight for better safety standards should be borne by the labor movement. Industrial processes should be considered dangerous until proven otherwise and safety standards should be written into collective bargaining agreements.

"There is absolutely no reason in the world that the techniques used to lower vinyl chloride exposure to one part per milion cannot be used in all processes to eliminate exposure to all chemicals."

The conference, attended by 235 delegates from across Canada, is to continue until Thursday with a variety of discussions about industrial safety.

The importance of the topic was driven home by CLC executive vice-president Julien Major, who reminded his audience that industrial accidents last year resulted in more lost time than labor-management disputes.

Participants in a morning discussion agreed that organized labor and governments have a role to play along with employers to assure that workers are adequately protected on the job.

Major urged unions to press for more effective joint safety committees, while others noted that governments generally act only under pressure and that some workers are reluctant to take advantage of safety equipment and medical tests that are available to them.

Slain by His Grandmother

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — A woman shot and killed her grandson as he advanced on her with a knife demanding money to buy narcotics, police said today.

No charges were filed against the 63-year-old grandmother who told police she grabbed a .22-calibre pistol and fired in self defence.

CLC CHALLENGE

OTTAWA (FP) — The Canadian Labor Congress plans to challenge the contention by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. that a joint Canada-U.S. Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline would be in the Canadian "national interest."

In a three-page intervention submitted to the National Energy Board, for the up-coming regulatory hearings the CLC claims that the case made by Canadian Arctic Gas in support of its $10-billion northern pipeline project is "both narrow and restrictive and must not be accepted in its present form."

The labor organization notes that with reference to the supply of gas, "it is well known that certain groups and individuals do not share the opinion of Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. about projected shortages."

The CLC says that "no adequate information exists to date concerning potential reserves in other areas of Canada" and that "a full consideration of the substitutability of other forms of production remains to be made," then the "credibility of the case made by Canadian Arctic Gas is considerably reduced."

Senator Raps Role of Oil Firms In Coast Guard Tanker Study

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The United States Coast Guard has been accused of conducting a study on oil tanker safety that was "not fairly balanced" and was in favor of the oil and shipping industries.

The accusation was made by Senator Lee Metcalf of Montana.

Metcalf said the study was apparently designed to back up the coast guard's contention that tankers carrying oil down the west coast from Alaska do not need double bottoms.

Metcalf said participants in the study included the chairman of the Exxon Corporation as well as officials of Gulf Oil, Standard Oil, Texaco, the shipping divisions of Mobil and Chevron, and the merchant shipping industry.

The study stressed navigational and human factors in accidents, rather than tanker design.

The coast guard attached the study to its draft regula- domestic trade. The final regulations, expected to omit a requirement for double bottoms, will be published "within a month" according to a coast guard official.

The official said he had been told not to comment on Sen. Metcalf's allegations, including a charge that industry participation in the study had been "de-emphasized."

The coast guard study was aimed at determining the best method of installing segregated ballast on oil tankers.

Segregated ballast is aimed at separating oil cargo from the tanks that are filled with water to maintain a vessel's balance.

Double bottoms are an additional safety measure providing a second layer of steel to prevent penetration of oil tanks in the event of a grounding or collision.

But the coast guard had already expressed reluctance to insist on double bottoms, claiming that such a move should be made on a worldwide basis, not by the U.S. alone.

According to Sen. Metcalf, the study was conducted by eight members of the oil and shipping industries and only three officials from the government

The study favored segregated ballast over double bottoms but suggested that regulations be drafted to allow for "further development of promising new concepts."

"The group noted that in its collective opinion the most effective measures for preventing accidental pollution and other types of major tanker accidents are those concerned with training and performance of ship's crews, and traffic and navigational improvements for ships of all types rather than further tanker design measures," the study report said.

"There is no design basis which would prevent the catastrophic accident except as it minimizes the possibility of explosion and fire after a collision," the report added.

The study group included W. O. Gray, chairman of Exxon; J. Christopher, of the Chevron Shipping Company, San Francisco; P. C. Dahan of the Mobil Shipping and Transportation Company, New York; S. J. Dwyer of the Gulf Oil Trading Company, Philadelphia; J. T. Jacobson of the Standard Oil Company, Cleveland; R. L. May of Texaco Inc. of New York; R. Y. Edwards, of the American Institute of Merchant Shipping in Washington and T. Lamb of Hydronautics Inc. of Laurel, Md.

The three government participants were R. A. Sutherland and R. I. Price of the coast guard and R. K. Kiss of the U.S. maritime administration.

Metcalf said that a first-draft copy of their report credited the American Petroleum Institute and the Institute of Merchant Shipping, of which the industry participants are members.

But a final version, attached to the draft regulations proposed by the coast guard, omitted the industry organization affiliations, he said.

Metcalf said the composition and activities of the study group may have violated a U.S. law prescribing certain regulations for official "advisory committees" appointed by the government.

These regulations require a declaration of such a group, which was not made, and public hearings, which were not held.

"Failure to declare the study group as an advisory committee puts the coast guard in the same boat as an international passenger who leaves things out of his customs declarations," the senator said.

"It was an industry-government endeavor, not fairly balanced as required by the federal Advisory Committee Act nor even acknowledged to be an advisors' committee, whose recommendations seem intended to substantiate the coast guard's conclusion that tankers hauling Alaskan oil do not need double bottoms to protect against accidental pollution," Metcalf added.

The study examined 12 different methods of tanker protection, including double bottoms, but the four designs which "match the over-all group evaluation" do not include double bottoms.

The preferred conclusion was that "segregated ballast capacity should be placed adjacent to the shell and that at the bottom it should preferably be outboard."

The report cited a "five-year coast guard study" showing that 79 per cent of all tanker accidents "result in zero or negligible pollution."

But the same study also found that the largest single cause of pollution is structural failure.

$5,000 Teacher Fines

BOSTON (UPI — Beginning today, the Boston Teachers Union will be fined $5,000 for each day it remains on strike against city schools, which are in the third week of court-ordered desegregation.

Judge Samuel Adams Tuesday found the president and vice-president of the BTU in contempt of court and gave them until Thursday to purge themselves by informing union members that sanctions would not be imposed against strike breakers.

Union president Henry Robinson and executive vice-president Joan Buckley declined after the court session to say whether they would comply with the ultimatum.

THREE BISHOPS FACE CENSURE

PORTLAND, Maine (WP) — In the harshest disciplinary action imposed since it accused the late Bishop James Pike of heresy nine years ago, the House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church Tuesday voted to censure three of its members who ordained 11 women to the priesthood 14 months ago.

The House of Bishops voted 113 to 18, with eight abstentions, to censure Rt. Rev. Daniel Corrigan of Santa Barbara, Calif., and Rt. Rev. Edward Welles, of Manset, Maine, both retired, and Rt. Rev. Robert DeWitt, of Ambler, Pa., who has resigned.

In a separate resolution the bishops voted to "decry the action" of Rt. Rev. George Barrett, who ordained four women as priests in Washington three weeks ago.

Bishop Barrett was dealt with in a separate resolution in order not to prejudice the possibility of later judicial action under church laws.

Rt. Rev. Hilburn Campbell, bishop of Charles Town, W. Va., called the censure vote "the strongest thing we could have done short of expelling them" from the House of Bishops.

Hiss Case Bugged Truman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new batch of documents from the FBI's "Alger Hiss" file reveals the famous spy case pursued by youthful Republican Rep. Richard Nixon caused embarrassment to the Truman administration.

President Truman dismissed the case in late 1948 as a "red herring".

He accused Nixon, a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee, of hunting headlines as the congressman from California pursued a link between Hiss, a high-level state department official, and confessed spy Whittaker Chambers.

One memo said the "red herring" charge was "causing considerable embarrassment in the state department" because Nixon had revealed his amassed evidence to an undersecretary who promised to tell Truman about it but failed to.

Hiss, who served a jail term for perjury after denying the alleged connection with Chambers, sued for release of government files on his case to help clear his name after 25 years.

GARDENING

A Greenhouse in Winter . . .

A glasshouse structure becomes a greenhouse when you fill it with living plants. When empty, it is a challenge to a gardener who knows that the food grown in the open garden in this past summer has saved dollars and returned much in pleasure and enjoyment.

Any kind of glasshouse will grow several kinds of food crops through most of the winter if planning and preparation are done now.

First, clean up the place if it has been neglected. Open all the vents; see that door and vents operate smoothly yet are tight-fitting to keep out fine snow, rain and draughts.

Ventilation will be needed in winter as in fall and spring but loose glass and rattling vents are hazards not only to plants but to anyone working in the greenhouse.

Cracked panes of glass are sure to be blown out in a gale or drop out (from overhead) with the weight of snow.

From experience in winter greenhousing, I suggest keeping a bamboo rake in the greenhouse for quick use during or following a depsoit of snow on the roof. It is an effective and safe tool for working off the snow from the lower two feet of roof, or more if the pitch is low and your arm is long.

Relieving the lower part from the weight of snow, the remainder soon slides down the wet glass as it becomes warmed by the warmer inside air. By remembering this trick you save yourself hours of glass replacement — a horrible job in winter.

Just now, you need to wash down all the glass roof and sides; do it with a hose and then wipe over with a clean cloth whatever glass you can reach, Then rinse again with the hose.

Having cleared out all accumulated items not needed in the greenhouse, clean the glass on the inside. All this cleanliness is not only in the interest of sanitation, but to allow every available ray of light to enter the structure during the darker months.

Clean also, with green soap, water, and scrub brush on a handle if necessary, the woodwork, plant benches, potting bench, wood flats. Scrub clay or plastic flower pots which have been used, and small hand tools. This is a sanitary measure as well as an aesthetic pleasure in using smooth clean tools when working.

Next job is soil. If you intend to use a ground bed for growing, the soil needs renewing. Dig out some, take to a low spot in the garden or pile it near the compost heap. Break up the subsoil.

Replace the topsoil with some of the best soil you have; dampen it and leave for a week for weed seeds (if any) to germinate. This eliminates competition when your vegetable seeds are germinating.

Choose suitable items from this list: lettuce, green onions, spinach, swiss chard, dwarf peas, carrots (perhaps), a root of comfrey, mint in a pail, chives, endive, Chinese cabbage, corn salad, and a deep large tub or box for a dozen potato tubers.

For these an inside temperature between 0 deg. C and 10 deg. C. for coldest days and nights would suffice. On sunny days the temperature would go higher, causing a need for ventilation yet also building up warmth to be retained by early closing of vents.

Don't delay in getting the unused glasshouse in shape to use as a food producing greenhouse this winter: seeds should be sown by the first of October at latest.

MOST IN FAVOR OF RENT CURBS

TORONTO (CP) — A survey by the Canadian Council on Social Development released today shows Canadians generally favor rent controls and government control of the cost of housing.

A 500-page report shows 62.4 per cent of those surveyed favor rent controls, and 70 per cent favor control of house prices.

The report was based on 2,000 interviews in households in various regions to try to measure the public's attitudes towards various social programs. A total of 1,213 persons responded to housing-costs questions.

Most surveyed said they are happy with their housing and neighborhoods, and 5 per cent are satisfied with the structural condition of their dwellings.

80 MILLION-YEAR-OLD PETRIFIED EGG FOUND

IIZUKA, Japan (AP) — Archeologists who examined a three-quarter-inch-thick petrified egg said they believe it was laid some 80 million years ago by an ichthyornis, an extinct toothed bird about the size of a pigeon.

Dr. Ikuo Obata of the research section of Tokyo's Archeological Museum said this might be the first discovery of an ichthyornis egg.

PLANES SCUPPER ROBIN HOOD

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI) — Robin Hood is being forced out of Sherwood Forest by noise pollution.

The British Broadcasting Corp., which is making a new television series about the legendary robber, has moved his hideout to the Forest of Dean in rural Gloucestershire, 100 miles southwest of Sherwood.

"There are too many noisy airplanes flying over Sherwood," a BBC spokesman said.

Safe as Money In The Bank!

PEORIA, Ill. (UPI) — Sorry For The Inconvenience, the sign on the night depository at the Prospect National Bank said.

Not as sorry as Ron Gehrke. It cost him $1,300.

Gehrke told police he took $500 in cash and an $800 cheque to the night depositry on Sept. 16 and discovered the sign.

"Sorry for the inconvenience," it said. "The night depository is temporarily out of order. For your convenience please place deposits in the box below."

Gehrke said the metal box below appeared to be wired to the bank's alarm system, so he put his deposit inside. He said he became suspicious when he had not received a bank receipt after several days.

When he checked with the bank, officials said they knew of neither a faulty night depository nor an auxiliary box.

Open Forum On Expansion

Camosun College will hold an open forum Monday from 3:30 to 5 p.m. to discuss progress in planning the $11 million expansion of the campus.

Architect John de Castri, who is designing the new buildings, will be there along with Jans Diemer, chairman of the campus planning committee, and several college councillors.

The forum is open to students, staff and the public, and will be held in room 305 of the Young Building.

Gliding Standards Eyed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federation Aeronautique Internationale is expected to take steps here this week that will put hang gliding on a firmer footing, leading to standards that may help make the sport safer.

Ann Welch of Farnham, England, an FAI vice-president, said Tuesday that the association likely will officially recognize hang gliding and set up a commission to create international standards for the sport.

Despite several deaths in hang gliding, Welch said, people dangling from the large, kite-like gliders are in no more danger of accidents than skiers.

But FAI members were concerned that the sport should not be unreasonably dangerous and were considering proficiency standards for pilots of these gliders.

SELF-HELP PARENT WORKSHOP

Everything you wanted to know about parenthood but were afraid to ask.

That, says Dr. Larry Dettweiler, will be the theme of the Parents' Self-help Workshop.

Dettweiler, a University of Victoria psychologist, and graduate student Robert Blank will lead the workshop starting Thursday and continuing for eight consecutive weeks.

The workshop, sponsored by the Natural Parent Group, Foster Parents Association, the Single-Parent Encouragement Program and the Parent Encouragement section of the department of human resources, will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday at Garden City United Church, 4054 Carey Road.

Dettweiler said many parents feel helpless in dealing with their children, especially in discipline.

Discipline other than physical punishment will be considered, such as democratic problem-solving; accentuating the positive; and limit-setting.

"Many traditional areas of parental support, for example the church and family ties, are not as strong today as they were in the past," said Blank, "and while many parents blame themselves for their children's problems, it's often the environment."

Topics to be discussed are confidence, the child at home, the father's point of view, mental, physical and emotional growth of children, early and late maturing children, the child at school, and communication within the family.

Registration fee is $1 per person and further information can be obtained at 598-5121.

ITU Case Moves to Vancouver

NANAIMO (CP) — A civil case against the Vancouver local of the International Typographical Union has been adjourned until Thursday when lawyers from both sides will present their arguments in Vancouver.

Twelve mechanical employees of the Comox District Free Press, a Courtenay-based weekly newspaper, are seeking damages and an injunction against the ITU as a result of their expulsion from the union.

The employees were fined from $2,500 to $5,000 each and expelled or suspended from the union after they crossed an ITU picket line on March 7, 1973.

"What this expulsion really meant was the end of the employees' livelihood in B.C.," said Mr. Justice R. T. Anderson during the B.C. Supreme Court hearing Tuesday. "I can understand it was hard for you to act in an impartial way because these people had also tried to get out of the union."

The judge made the comments during testimony by Len Guy, who at the time was president of the Vancouver local of the ITU. Testimony showed that Guy laid the charges and also was on the five-member committee which heard the charges.

Guy said that during the union hearing on charges of crossing the picket line, he attempted to question the person representing the 12 workers "on a friendly basis to try and solve the situation but I repeatedly met with a negative reaction."

"I was trying to negotiate a solution to the problem," he said. "I was not sent as a judge and jury."

The 12 employees said the picket line was set up in an effort to test their loyalty because they had been attempting to leave the union. The labor relations board had earlier turned down an application for decertification.

The union has said the picket line was set up in an effort to gain a first contract with Campbell River employees of E. W. Bickle Co. Ltd., which owns the Free Press.

Ont. N-Plant Leaks Confirmed

DOUGLAS POINT (CP) — Ontario Hydro officials said Tuesday there were two minor leaks of radioactive heavy water last Sunday from the Douglas Point generating station at the Bruce nuclear power development.

Hydro officials said the leaks at the Douglas Point plant, about 35 miles southwest of Owen Sound, occurred during a shutdown of the nuclear station for routine repairs.

Elgin Horton, operations manager for the nuclear development, said Tuesday one of the leaks, in a heat exchange tube, resulted in the loss of about 80 kilograms (176.4 pounds) of heavy water into Lake Huron. The other leak was confined to the plant.

The amount of radioactive material was less than one per cent of maximum safe limits under atomic energy control board regulations.

Terrorist Ban Applies

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will not allow foreign terrorists to attend an international crime conference in Toronto next month, an external affairs official said Tuesday.

The official said persons known to be terrorists will be stopped at airports and border crossings and not allowed into the country to attend the Oct. 30-Nov. 2 meeting of the American Society of Criminology.

Society president Nicholas Kittrie said in Washington Monday members of terrorist organizations were welcome to participate in the Toronto conference "so long as they leave their guns at home and confine their ammunition to ideas."

A United Nations crime conference was shifted recently from Toronto to Geneva. The federal government wanted it postponed because of controversy over UN admission of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) to the conference.

The external affairs official said that under immigration law terrorists are barred from Canada. But this would not necessarily prevent a person familiar with terrorist activities from attending the criminology society meeting, he said.

Justice experts from several countries are expected to attend the meeting. A 30-member Canadian delegation is expected to include Solicitor-General Warren Allmand.

No Natives Applying for Liquor Ration Cards

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — With only a few days remaining before a controversial system to ration liquor to Dogrib Indians is launched, not one native has applied for a ration card.

Starting Oct. 1, the 608 treaty Indians of the Dogrib band who live along the north shore of Great Slave Lake will have to produce identification cards and special ration cards that restrict them to one bottle of liquor and a dozen beer or six bottles of wine a month.

The move is the latest attempt to battle liquor abuse that Chief Alexis Arrowmaker, of nearby Rae-Edzo, describes as an epidemic among his people.

It was Chief Arrowmaker who urged territorial commissioner Stuart Hodgson to institute ration cards following a plebiscite at four nearby Dogrib communities earlier this year. Two-thirds of the natives voted in favor of restricting the amount of alcohol sold.

"Over the years rationing hasn't been that successful . . . but we will do anything to help; at least we will give it a try," said T. C. Robinson, general manager of the territorial liquor system.

Liquor officials say they will take a strict stand with the cards, which no one — so far — has picked up at the territorial liquor control offices. Lost cards will not be replaced, and people who look native will not be served if they cannot produce proper identification, even though they may contend they are not from the Dogrib Band.

Whites who live in the communities where the plebiscite was held also will be forced to abide by the ration limit because "you cannot have two people living side by side and living by two different sets of laws," said Robinson.

But he admits the system has some loopholes. For instance, the whites and Metis in Yellowknife are not affected by the ration, but Dogribs living in the capital must undergo rationing even though they had no vote in the plebiscite.

Also, every native or person who looks native in the territories will be asked to sign an affidavit swearing they are not Dogrib the first time they buy liquor in Yellowknife after Oct. 1.

Anti-Crime Tool Eyed

SASKATOON (CP) — Public security demands legal tools to fight organized crime in Canada, says Justice Minister Otto Lang.

Lang said the international dimension of organized crime has made it increasingly complicated and sophisticated and the law must be capable of dealing with the real and continuing threat of such criminal activity.

At a news conference to outline proposed changes in the criminal code, Lang said amendments proposed in Bill C-71 would extend the law to cover the possession of "fruits of the crime" and are designed to lessen the flow of "laundered" funds into Canada.

He said under the present law it is an offence to knowingly possess anything obtained by crime in Canada or elsewhere. However, the law does not apply to the proceeds into which it may have been converted.

The minister said the proposed changes are in response to indications from police that funds being used legitimately in Canada have been secured from illegal sources.

Lang also said changes would prohibit conspiracy in Canada to commit an offence outside the country and conspiracy outside Canada to commit an offence here.

The first measure, he said, is designed to deter Canada being used as a base for criminal activity. It would prohibit the type of situation where a company incorporated in Canada conspired to defraud the public or investors in another country.

"The other measure would prohibit the planning abroad of such crimes as drug offences or acts of terrorism intended to be committed in Canada."

The amending bill, which Lang said he hopes will be approved by Christmas, also contains changes to the laws governing rape.

Lang said the amendments would make it easier for a victim of rape to face the trial process. He said he hoped the change will increase the number of rapes reported.

BILL CHALLENGE EYED

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang's office said Tuesday the federal government intends to intervene in a challenge to Quebec's official Language Act if it finds anything in the act to be unconstitutional.

David Cuthbertson, executive assistant to Justice Minister Otto Lang, said the intervention would come when school boards in Montreal bring their case against the language law to court.

They are challenging the constitutionality of sections that require language tests for children who want to go to English-language schools in the province. Hundreds of children of Italian immigrants living in Montreal have been prevented by the law from going to English-language schools.

Lang, as federal attorney-general, has been named a party to the case because of the constitutional factor.

By MARY MOORE

All of us are trying to make our meat purchases stretch. It is a great comfort to read and hear nutritionists advise that North Americans do not need the large amount of meat they eat — in fact do not utilize all of it in their digestive process. A rough guess is that only half of our meat intake is beneficially utilized by the body.

So watch for meat stretchers and an increase in vegetable and whole grain recipes — for health and budget reasons.

POTATO AND SAUSAGE SCALLOP

(serves 6)

3 large potatoes (1½ lbs.)
2 tbsp. margarine
½ c. chopped onion (1 medium)
¼ c. chopped green pepper (½ medium)
1 lb. link beef sausage OR ½ lb. thinly sliced Polish sausage (see below)
2-3 c. grated Parmesan cheese
3 eggs
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. basil
⅛ tsp. Tabasco pepper sauce
1½ c. milk

Scrub potatoes and put on to cook in salted water until barely tender — not soft. Drain and peel.

Meanwhile melt the margarine and in it gently saute the onion and green pepper 5 minutes. Do not brown.

Slice the peeled potatoes into a medium-large casserole. Cover with sausages. (I made two of these: one with sliced Polish sausage and one with link beef sausages and liked the beef sausages better.) Sprinkle grated cheese evenly over. Spoon onion-green pepper mixture over evenly. Beat eggs with the salt, basil and Tabasco and add milk and beat in. Pour evenly over casserole contents.

Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes or until custard is

We served ours with broccoli from my garden. This is an attractive and flavorful dish that I can recommend without any reservations.

BLACK FOREST CAKE

Chocolate sponge batter:

2 cups whole eggs (8 EXTRA large)
1 cup plus 2 tbsp. granulated sugar.
1¾ cups PLUS 2 tsp. stirred but not sifted cake flour.
½ cup unsifted cocoa
⅝ tsp. baking soda
¼ cup PLUS 2 tbsp. warm melted butter.

Filling and frosting ingredients:

1 19-oz. can cherry pie filling
¾ pt. (15-oz. OR 1⅞ cups) whipping cream (32 per cent)
2 tbsp. icing sugar
1½ tbsp. Kirch or Cherry Heering liqueur bitter chocolate (see below)

Into large beater bowl break eggs; add sugar and beat ten minutes on "high" until they are thick and tripled in bulk. Do not UNDERBEAT. Meanwhile sift together the flour, cocoa aand baking soda. Remove beaters and FOLD flour mixture in with wire whisk or slotted spoon, along with the warm melted butter. Divide evenly into three buttered 9" teflon layer cake pans. If not teflon, line bottom of pans with buttered wax paper. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 18 to 20 minutes on centre shelf in oven. Cool on cake racks.

With long sharp knife split cakes carefully to give you six layers. Place layer No. 1 on large fancy cake plate and cover with one-third of the cherry pie filling. Cover with layer No. 2 and spread it with whipped cream flavored with the icing sugar and liqueur of your choice. Repeat until you have the six layers stacked with alternating fillings between. Now spread whipped cream on sides.

If desired firmly grasp whole cake between palms and roll in coarsely grated bitter chocolate sprinkled on log strip of wax paper. Return cake to cake plate and spread top with whipped cream. Pipe whipped cream around top edge using "star" decorating tube. Decorate with halved red maraschino or candied cheries and curl of bitter chocolate. This torte is at its best on the day that it is made.

It Will Take 26 Minutes To 'Run Off' a Milkshake

By DR. JEAN MAYER
Professor of Nutrition, Harvard University

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Exercise and weight reduction are two areas where misconceptions abound, but perhaps the most common myth was recently summed up by a young friend of mine with the following equation: "Eat an apple, swim half-way to London."

I pointed out that these two rules would keep a person slim only if he could do the exercise in nine minutes flat!

My friehd's mistaken notion — that it takes a lot of concentrated exercise to burn off a little bit of extra food — is a common one that people find hard to overcome.

Every time you consume 3,500 calories more than your daily needs, they will be deposited in a pound of excess body-fat tissue. Reverse the process, either by cutting down food calories or raising exercise calories, and one pound of body-fat tissue will be utilized for energy.

When I explained this to my young friend, he countered with another objection: "Sure, you can work off a pound of fat by walking 36 hours, rowing hard for three hours or splitting wood for seven hours!"

This is true if you are determined to lose a pound all at once. But, of course, such concentrated activity is impossible for most of us. It is possible to work off excess weight in the same manner in which it is put on — that is, a little bit at a time — but we still have calorie requirements that must be met each day to support our bodies' needs.

The recommended daily allowance for calories is 2,700 a day for a 150-pound man and 2,000 for a 120-pound woman. Those figures vary with size (a bigger person uses more calories just to move the extra weight around) and with activity (a very active man, a lumberjack who does not use a power saw or a long-distance runner, for instance, can consume up to 6,000 calories a day).

Exactly how much exercise is required to burn up the 100 calories in my young friend's apple? You can expend 100 calories by walking briskly for 19 minutes or by peddling a bicycle for five minutes. Or you could sleep it off in an hour and 18 minutes.

If the apple was in an apple pie and you ate an average portion, you would have enough "fuel" for 73 minutes of walking, 46 minutes of cycling, 34 minutes of swimming, 19 minutes of running or just about five hours of sleeping.

Obviously, low-calorie foods are easier to work off than richer ones. You can run off a whole cup of green beans (27 calories) in one minute. A carrot (42 calories) takes two minutes to run off. At the other extreme, a malted milk shake, containing 502 calories, can be run off in 26 minutes, walked off in 97 minutes or slept off in six and a half hours! So if you incorporate too many high-calorie foods in the day's menu, you may have to swim half-way to London to keep from gaining weight!

By using a calorie counter, you can calculate the approximate effort needed to burn off a specific number of calories by using the following energy cost-per hour figures for a 150-pound man:

- Walking at three miles an hour burns up 270 calories.
- Bicycling at 10 miles an hour expends 420 calories.
- Swimming the crawl or jogging consumes 500 calories in one hour.
- Squash or skiing consumes 600 calories in one hour.

In addition to burning off extra calories, regular exercise helps you to regulate your appetite, so that you will be less likely to consume more calories than your body needs.

I finally did manage to convince my friend of the truth of this last proposition.

Turnip Casserole

2 Medium to large turnips
1 cup smooth sweetened applesauce
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup melted margarine — divided (see below)
4 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. seasoning salt (or plin salt)
¼ tsp. pepper
1¾ cups soft breadcrumbs (divided)

Wash, slice and pare turnips. Put on to cook in boiling water to three-quarters cover and cook covered until very tender. Drain and mash until very smooth. (Pete used the turnip water in next day's vegetable soup.)

To the turnip add the applesauce, beaten eggs, 6 tablespons of melted margarine, sugar, salt, pepper and ONE CUP crumbs. Turn into greased 2-quart casserole. Top with remaining ¾ cup crumbs tossed with remaining 2 tablespoons melted margarine. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 30 minutes.

NOTE: If desired Turnip Casserole may be made in advance, (as you can see) and refrigerated until before mealtime.

STUFFED OUTSIZED ZUCCHINI

1 16" long fat zucchini
¼ cup margarine
1 medium onion chopped
1 medium green pepper chopped
⅜ cup chopped celery
1 lb. ground chuck beef
⅛ tsp. garlic powder
¼ tsp. pepper
½ tsp. curry powder
1 tsp. salt
½ cup tomato juice OR chopped tomato
4 cups soft white breadcrumbs

In a very large frying pan melt the margarine and gently saute in it the onion, green pepper and celery for 5 minutes. Add the ground chuck and to break up the lumps use the potato masher for a minute or so to combine vegetables and meat. Saute until meat is grey — not brown. Remove from heat and add seasonings and crumbs and gently toss.

Wash zucchini and cut in half lengthwise. Scoop out seedy pulp and discard.

Sprinkle insides of zucchini halves with salt, fill with stuffing, pat it down a little, place on broiler pan (or cookie sheet), spread exposed upper edges of zucchini with margarine, sprinkle that with paprika and bake TWO HOURS at 350 deg. Fahr.

To serve cut into crosswise portions.

Cukes Big in His Kitchen

By TINY BENNETT

There has been a great crop of cucumbers this year and they are plentiful and cheap in the stores.

I planted 18 seeds and every second day I'm picking a six quart basket, so cucumbers are big in my kitchen at this time.

Originating in Southern Asia, cucumbers are a relative of the gourd family and have been cultivated for 4,000 years. Consisting of 96 per cent water they are a fine diet vegetable since a medium-sized one only contains 25 calories.

Well known as a salad vegetable and for pickling when small or sliced thin, the cucumber can also be cooked into a delicious second vegetable in place of say potatoes, to go with a meat and green vegetable course.

For our purposes there are two types, the short green field cucumber and the very long thin almost seedless English type that is grown in greenhouses.

The English variety, now common in North America, is the best choice for eating raw with salads or as filling in a a delicate fresh sandwich.

Since the skin of this type is thin and slightly bitter some people prefer to simply wash it, cut off the end and slice it skin included into very thin rounds. A fine alternative is to score such a cuke lengthwise with a sharp-pointed kitchen knife all the way around for a less bitter and quite decorative effect before slicing.

Peeled and cut into thick chunks, with the centre removed, the English variety makes fine vegetable "boats" that are delicious when filled with a mixture of say canned salmon or tuna, with a big dab of thick chilled mayonnaise on top.

The more common, and cheaper, dark green cucumbers should always be peeled, since the skin is tough, except when small sizes are used for pickling. I have a surplus of over-sized picklers and I have been putting these down in pickle with a clove of garlic per jar, in a simple but effective recipe.

LAZY DILLS

Wash 16 to 24 cucumbers five to six inches long, dry and, without skinning, slice into strips lengthwise without removing seeds. Pack into four one-quart sterile jars, filling up all spaces and top with a thick slice of peeled raw onion and one garlic clove (optional).

To each jar, add ¼ teaspoon celery seeds; one teaspoon pickling spices; one tablespoon dill seeds. In a stainless steel or enamel pot, dissolve four cups sugar in four cups white vinegar and two cups water, add ½ cup salt, bring to the boil and fill the jars, seal and process in a hot-water bath for 10 minutes.

Cool and store in a dark area and leave for one month before eating. The pickles will shrink during the hot-water bath but will later expand to refill the jars.

To cook cucumbers as a vegetable, it is necessary to first remove some water content, so they don't end up as a tasteless mush. This preparation is also a great way to obtain crisp raw cucumber slices to chill as a cold side dish.

Six medium-sized cucumbers around four to five inches make enough for four people — hot or cold.

Peel firm cukes, slice lengthwise into quarters and scoop out all the seeds with the sharp edge of a kitchen spoon.

In a bowl, combine two tablespoons wine vinegar with one teaspoon salt and a pinch of sugar and toss the cucumber quarters in this marinade and leave for at least ½ hour and better still two hours. Put the bowl in the fridge and toss from time to time. When ready to cook, drain and carefully pat dry with paper towel.

Put an oven rack in the middle of the oven and set the heat at 375F, while melting three tablesppoons butter or margarine in a shallow baking dish. Add ½ teaspoon dill seeds and three cleaned green onions choped very fine — green tops included, toss the cucumber quarters in this melted-blended mix until evenly coated and bake for one hour, tossing the vegetable two or three times during this cooking.

The cooked cucumbers will be slightly crisped and firm, a little like a squash, but with that deliciously blended cucumber-dill-onion flavor.

I enjoy eating the baked cucumbers at this point but many French cooks regard this as basic preparation and carry on from there in some wonderful variations.

They turn the cooked cucumbers into a heated vegetable dish together with the butter sauce and sprinkle with freshly chopped parsley.

For creamed cucumbers they boil down a cup of whipping cream until reduced by half, season with salt and pepper, fold it into the hot cucumbers and sprinkle with fresh parsley.

And delight of delights, make a cheese sauce, fold it into the baked vegetable, sprinkle with grated mild cheese, dot with butter and brown under a hot broiler for two to three minutes.

Cooked cucumbers are very different, quite easy to prepare and in a time of glut of this vegetable is a remarkably cheap and quite fancy vegetable dish.

BOILED TOMATOES

(Makes 6 servings)

½ cup finely chopped sweet gherkins
½ cup dairy sour cream
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 tsp. Worcestershire
2 tsps. lemon juice
1½ tsp. prepared mustard
Salt and pepper
6 broiled tomatoes.

Blend together gherkins, sour cream, mayonnaise, Worcestershire, lemon juice and mustard. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Spoon on hot broiled tomatoes.

NOTE: About 1¼ cups topping.

Eat Tidbits Right Away? Or Save for Last Swallow

CRAIG CLAIBORNE

NEW YORK — A long time ago we developed a theory that most people who truly care about what they eat fall into two groups, those who invariably save the tastiest tidbit (the heart of watermelon, for example) for the very last bite; and those who gobble up the most flavorsome morsel of a dish at the moment of sitting down to dine.

We quite unequivocally belong to the group that saves the best to the end, working up slowly to that last exquisite swallow. We were rfeflecting on that while eyeing our small plot of herbs just outside the kitchen window of our place in The Springs, N.Y.

With autumn in the van we continue to have a flourishing emerald green patch of fresh sorrel growing between the tarragon and thyme and we are saving the sorrel among our herbs for the last of the best.

Oddly enough, with one notable exception sorrel has never enjoyed the reputation in this country that it has in Europe. The exception is schav, a soup whose principal ingredient is sorrel and a dish most commonly appreciated and associated with Russian and Polish Jews or those of Russian and polish descent.

Next to schav, the most famous soup in the world containing sorrel is the French potage Germiny, also made with chicken broth and shredded sorrel plus eggs as a thickener.

It is one of the absolute marvels of soupdom and can be eaten hot or cold. In decent soil sorrel grows like weeds, thus the name sour grass. The seeds are widely available in garden supply houses and in seed catalogues; the leaves, which are rounded and sometimes slightly pointed, resemble the leaves of young mustard or turnip greens and have a distinctly sour or acid taste. This acidity offers a welcome counterpoint to foods noted for their fat content, eel, for example, which is splendid in a green sauce cooked with sorrel among other flavorings.

Sorel is enormously compatible with many foods. It is delectable when freshly shredded and served on tomatoes with oil and vinegar and a touch of salt. It harmonizes elegantly with the likes of chicken, fish and seafood as the recipes offered here.

SHRIMP WITH SORREL

1½ to 1¾ pounds raw shrimp, in the shell
1 pound fresh sorrel (see note)
5 tablespoons butter
1-3 cup finely chopped onion
3 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup dry white wine
3 tablespoons tomato paste
2 cups heavy cream
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
¼ cup Cognac or Burbon
2 egg yolks
Toast rounds, optional (see note.)

1. Peel and devein the shrimp. Rinse well and pat dry. Reserve the shrimp shells.

2. Pick over the sorrel, remove and discard any tough stems. Rinse well and pat dry. On a flat surface, cut the sorrel into fine shreds. This is called a chiffonade. Set aside.

3. Heat two tablespoons butter in a small, deep skillet and add the shrimp shells, stirring. Cook briefly and add the onion and shallots. Cook about two minutes, stirring frequently, and sprinkle with flour, stirring. Add the wine, tomato paste, stirring until well blended. Cook about five minutes.

4. Add the cream and cook about five minutes over high heat. Strain through a sieve, pushing down to extract as much liquid as possible from the solids.

5. Heat one tablespoon of butter in a small saucepan and add the sorrel. Cook, stirring, just until wilted.

6. Heat the remaining butter in a saucepan and add the shrimp. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and cook briefly, stirring, just until the shrimp change color. Add the Cognac and ignite it. When the flame dies down, stir in the cream sauce and sorrel, bring to the boil and simmer about one minute.

7. Beat the yolks and add a little of the hot sauce, stirring constantly. Return the mixture to the sauce and stir without boling. Remove from the heat immediately. Serve on toast rounds.

Yield: Six to eight servings.

Note: If sorrel is not available, substitute one tablespoon chopped fresh tarragon or dill, but do not cook the herb before adding. Or sprinkle with chopped chives before serving.

The best way to make toast rounds is to cut fresh white bread slices with a bread cutter. Brush with butter and bake in 400-degree oven until toasted.

Good News for Her Food Fans: A New Julia Child Book Ready

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (NYT) — A new Julia is on the way.

For legions of food fans, the first encounter with Julia Child, either on the "French Chef" public television program or through the two volumes of "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" — referred to generically in many kitchens as "Julia" — has meant a changed life: carbon steel knives, the faithful following of intricate recipes, and a vastly enhanced sense of cooking and eating.

This fall, a new book "From Julia Child's Kitchen," the distillation of 25 years at cutting board and saute pan is to be published, an event that is already beginning to set nibblers and booksellers alike to licking their chops.

The book is appearing at a time when the beating of saucepans for La Nouvelle Cuisine — a purported revolution against the rich butter, flour and cream that have been the base of classic French cookery — is reaching a crescendo.

"Hmpf," said Mrs. Child recently, her voice rising several octaves. A cucumber cascaded in an arc of pale green discs from the blade of her triangular knife.

"Vegetables astringently crisp, indeed," she went on, referring to one of a spate of recent articles. "Why, that's from people who've never had a properly cooked green bean, just those limp frozen ones."

(A proper green bean, as loyalists know — dropped in rapidly boiling water, snatched out after four minutes or so, refreshed under icy water to fix color and texture and shaken about in a hot pan with a little butter added later — is an entirely different thing.)

A culinary contretemps? The suggestion that the vision of Paul Bocuse, the famous French chef, stalking the fruit and vegetable stands of Lyons at dawn like a martinet at regimental inspection is — dare one say it — something of a hype?

"Oh, it's just that Paris P.R. game," said Mrs. Child cheerfully, waving the knife. "Well, if they can get away with it — why not? They've made a lot of fun."

For tardy trencherpersons, the new school is the product of a band of younger, highly successful and well-publicized artists known collectively as La Grande Cuisine Francaise, who share a galaxy of Michelin stars.

The most radical and esthetic of the group — the Robespierre of the Roux — is Michel Guerard, who, in battling his own bulges, developed a striking departure he calls "La Cuisine Minceur," an almost dietetic style, in which traditional sauces are abandoned, foods are cooked quickly in their own moisture, served with a julienne or puree of the vegetables in which they are cooked and wild herbs are emphasized.

Mrs. Child expressed some doubts. "I don't think people are really going to want to go out to an expensive French restaurant to eat pureed carrots," she said.

Here in Cambridge, one of the dinner party capitals of the world, where the autumn air is as heavy with the scent of beef bourguignon as with burning leaves, Mrs. Child is a figure of awe. Her telephone is listed, and she is often called by a distraught new cook who has discovered the lack of an ingredient or utensil as the guests knock on the door.

The new book, Mrs. Child says, is for "people whose hobby is food, not for housewives." The word "housewives," in her vocabulary, ranks with "home economists" as a term to be disdained.

It is more informal than the textbook — like "Mastering," filled with anecdotes and reminiscences and even a few George Price cartoons. But the new book remains a teaching vehicle in which Mrs Child stresses the rules and techniques of cooking, along with her marvelously detailed directions. Her husband has once again contributed the explicit drawings and photographs done — unlike almost every other cookbook — from the perspective of the cook.

Best Place to Go

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a man who has got to be the world's biggest liar, cheat and hypocrite, yet who never misses a Sunday in church? — HATES HYPOCRITES.

DEAR HATES: I can't think of a better place for him. A church is a hospital for sinners, not a museum for saints.

DEAR ABBY: I am one broken-hearted, 17-year-old girl. Bobby and I went together for three years and planned on getting married this Christmas when Bobby turns 18. (I am ashamed to admit it, but we had been having sex since I was 14.)

Well, last week, he slam tore my heart out when he told me that he'd been fooling around with a 15-year-old girl and got her pregnant. Now this girl's parents are on top of him to marry their daughter. They say he either has to marry her or go to jail.

Abby, please help me get my mind straight. I can't turn off my love for Bobby.

He says he will marry the girl to give her baby a name, and as soon as he can he'll divorce her and marry me. He wants to keep on seeing me anyway because he says he still loves me, regardless. What should I do ? — ALL TORN UP.

DEAR TORN: If I were you, I'd forget him, dear. If Bobby could have been fooling around with another girl while planning to marry you, his "love" for you couldn't have been very sincere.

Don't see him again — ever. He spells trouble with a capital T.

DEAR ABBY: I surely do sympathize with "Smoked out," whose friend's smoking made him sick.

I had the same problem with my dad.

He would always smoke cigars in the car.

One time when I was about seven, he was smoking a cigar in the car, and I said, "Dad, your cigar is making me sick."

He replied, "No, it's not."

Then I said, "Yes it is."

Then I threw up in the car.

He hasn't smoked cigars in the car since. MIKE.

DEAR ABBY: How does a happily married 35-year-old woman handle flirtations initiated by a married man in the presence of both spouses?

I find myself very much embarrassed, and needless to say, his wife and my husband are not exactly overjoyed.

How can such a man be put in his place in a nice but firm manner? We run into this couple fairly often, and I am dreading the next encounter. —FLUSTERED

DEAR FLUSTERED: When next you meet, give Casanova an impersonal hello, then promptly launch into small talk with his wife. Keep it a two-way conversation until you depart. No man can "flirt" without a partner.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: If you enjoy biographies, beg, borrow or buy "The Remarkable Life of Dr. Armand Hammer," by Bob Considine. It's a fascinaing book about one of the world's most successful, creative, talented, yet warmly human men of our time. I loved it!

September Salads Can Be as Varied as You Please

HILDA BEASTALL

Salads in September may be as varied as you please, especially with the aid of the home garden or the allotment garden. Even non-salad eaters may be won over by assembling two or three of their favorite foods on one plate with a good dressing.

Most of us are convinced that vegetables and fruits do lose some of their food values when heated in cooking and more still in liquids (cooking water) which are discarded. Losses also occur when these foods are cut and the cut surfaces are exposed to light and air for even a few minutes.

When we make salads we must assemble all the ingredients around us before beginning to cut into the vegetable or fruit. Usually we need either lemon juice or oil to coat cut surfaces. Nutritionists tell us that lemon juice on cut fruit surfaces not only prevents discoloring but really does inhibit the loss of vitamin C which occurs when in contact with air. Oil will also coat a cut surface and delay vitamin losses.

To make salads attractive to the non-salad eaters of the family keep the large lettuce leaves to a minimum at first. Other green leafy vegetables can be used as substitutes and you may find that one of these will be preferred. Young small bright green leaves of a Bibb or Buttercrunch variety will add the color note in this September Salad.

SEPTEMBER SALAD NO. 1

1 cup grated carrot
2 tsp fresh lemon juice
1 tsp finely chopped sweet onion
8 small cooked beets
16 circles young zucchini
8 bright green lettuce leaves or more if liked.

Dressing:

2 tbsp soy or sunflower oil
1 tbsp fresh lemon juice
Shake of paprika and chili powder
¼ tsp salt
½ tsp sugar
1 red ripe tomato, pulp only.

Make dressing first and chill: Shake all ingredients except tomato pulp in a small glass jar with tight screw lid, until thickened.

Combine grated carrot and fine onion promptly with lemon juice, cover and set aside.

Arrange 4 zucchini slices on each of 4 salad plates, leaving space in centre of plate. If beets are small, place 2 on 2 zucchini slices, or use 4 halves.

Mound the carrot-onion mix in centre of each plate; stick in a couple of the bright green lettuce leaves one each side.

Dribble dressing over all parts of the salad and serve without further chilling.

Complaints about salads point to their being so chilled that no special flavor remains in anything. When you work with fresh ingredients there is no need to chill before serving.

HOME LUNCH PLATE

½ cup finely shredded green lettuce or cabbage
1 large or 2 smaller ripe tomatoes
2 squares mild Cheddar cheese
¼ cup homemade yogurt (fat-free)
1 tsp lemon juice
Few grains salt and sugar.

SEPTEMBER SALAD NO. 2

1 cup diced young squash, any summer kind
1 cup diced sweet apple
1 tsp lemon juice
¼ cup chopped dates
½ cup diced mild Cheddar cheese
1 tsp finely chopped sweet onion
1 tbsp chopped parsley or chervil
¼ cup homemade yogurt
1 tbsp ground raw peanuts

Shredded green lettuce or cabbage.

Makes 2 servings on your choice of green, lettuce or cabbage, endive or cornsalad.

A Warm Vegetable Salad is sometimes liked and is most delicious when served with warm homemade wholewheat buns, with perhaps Beanburgers for Saturday or Sunday supper.

WARM VEGETABLE SALAD

¼ cup chopped sweet onion
1½ cups green or yellow beans, sliced
1½ cups diced squash, any kind
1 cup chopped spinach and beet leaves
¼ cup chopped young comfrey tips and leaves
¼ tsp salt.

Dressing:

2 tbsp soy oil
1 tbsp lemon juice

Few grains sugar and salt (optional).

Prepare vegetables in order given, adding each to a saucepan with just enough boiling water to cover. Begin cooking while preparing next vegetable. Add only enough water to cover. When last chopped greens go in, boil sharply for 10 minute longer. Vegetables should still be crisp though tender.

Drain off all liquid thoroughly; retain in glass jar for next day's use. Shake pan, replace lid, keep warm while making dressing.

Shake the dressing ingredients together in a glass jar for a few minutes, pour over the warm cooked vegetables. Shake the pan vigorously with lid on to coat all pieces and serve at once with thick slices of vine-ripened, sun-warmed red or golden tomatoes.

Expert Found a Hot Solution To an Eye-Watering Problem

By JAMES P. STERBA

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (NYT) — There are numerous quiet specialists throughout the land who, unlike politicians, patiently avoid jumping into each chic new problem in order to marshal their expertise for public benefaction at precisely the right moment of national need..

Dr. Roy Minoru Nakayama is one such expert. A survivor of the Battle of the Bulge and a German prisoner-of-war camp, he toiled humbly for years anticipating a problem that finally arose last summer. Then, this summer, before it could capture national attention and anxiety, Makayama steppdd into the breach and revealed its solution: the Numex Big Jim.

The problem has been that the production and processing of hot chili peppers has not been able to keep up with the rising demand for these eye-watering, tongue-roasting enemies of the bland palate that has soared in recent years as Americans discovered that there is more to a meal than meat and potatoes.

Once confined largely to Mexican dishes in the Southwest, chilies have moved north and east as spicy dishes from other countries began inhabiting restaurant menus and homemakers mined cookbooks for haute hot dishes from Szechuan, Korea, India and Latin America.

Prices rose, doubling in a single season in some areas. In others, chilies — fresh green and dried red ones — were simply not available. In New Mexico, which grows more chilies than any other vegetable, prices went up 50 per cent and threatened to spill into politics in the same way that the price of bread has in the Middle West.

Enter Numex Big Jim: hot, hardy, and — its ultimate attribute — huge. After years of breeding experiments, Nakayama, who at 53 is the Masters and Johnson of chilies, gave the world its first foot-long, five-ounce chili.

Roughly one-third larger than the two most popular varieties — Anaheim and New Mexico No. 6 — the Numex Big Jim is also hotter. That means 30 per cent more volume per acre, lower harvesting cost because it takes less labor to pick big chilies than small ones, and more hot.

Chili peppers are not really peppers — a mislabel that started when Columbus took some back to Spain where they were confused with Piper nigrum, the dried fruit of a tree that people grind up and put next to salt.

Chilies are Capsicum frutescens — cousins of potatoes, eggplants and tomatoes. There are more than 200 varieties, ranging from the heatless Bell pepper, which is sold next to lettuce in most supermarkets, to the tiny jalapeno, which some people say should be sold next to the fire extinguisher.

About 90 per cent of the varieties are hot like the tobasco and cayenne groups. In this country, Bell and paprika varieties are notable exceptions as are pimientos. Most are green, then turn red as they dry out. Their redness is valuable as dye for everything from hot dogs to lipstick. But no hot varieties are used for dye, insists Dr. Nakayama, thereby demolishing a possible explanation for the phrase "hot lips."

Nakayama, who is called upon to consult worldwide on chili growing, says everyone asks him where the hotness comes from. Answer: 8-Methyl-N-vanillyl-6-nomenamide, or an isomer thereof, which has been named Capsaicine.

It forms an acidic, oily, orange layer near the seeds on the inside veins of the chili. Unlike the heat in onions, it is highly insoluble in water and thus doesn't boil away fast on the stove.

The hottest chili Dr. Nakayama has tasted is about half an inch long and comes from the Bahamas.

"If you rate chili hotness on a scale from 1 to 10, then that one would be about number 12," he said. He would rate other hot varieties like this: 1. New Mexico No. 6 and Anaheim 3. Numex Big Jim. 5. Sandia. 6. Espanola and Cayenne. 7. Jalepeno. 8. Tabasco. 9. Santaka (from Japan).

BRIDLE BITS

By PHIL MERRICK

Fire in a horse stable is probably one of the most distressing disasters a human will ever witness. Even though men and women have risked and often lost their lives in rescuing horses from burning buildings the animals are so panic stricken they are difficult to handle, break away and run back to their stalls to burn to death.

In spite of the horror of fire out of control, it is astonishing the number of fire hazards existing in the average stable. Unprotected light bulbs that could be broken and the ensuing spark resulting in fire. Poor quality extension cords, often frayed, left plugged in when not needed. Radios that could be knocked down by a cat jumping up on the shelf with the resulting dangerous short circuit.

While on the subject of electrical hazards it should be pointed out that horses have been lost through electrocution, having bitten an electrical cord that happened to be within reach. A survey of the electrical wiring and outlets in every stable and corrections made where needed could prevent a heart-breaking disaster.

Every stable, even if only large enough to accommodate one horse, should have a "no smoking" sign placed in a most obvious position. A sign reading "no smoking beyond this point" erected some yards from the actual building is a good measure. It ensures that the smoker discards his "fire" at some distance from the stable not just outside where it could smolder unnoticed.

With most owners using sawdust for bedding and the consequent layer of sawdust around most stables the hazard from discarded cigarette butts is great.

In most "horsey" circles, smoking while on a horse is considered bad form and is a habit that can provide its share of accidents.

Recently a mounted rider dropped his lighted cigarette which landed in his mount's mane, just in front of the saddle. An effort to swipe the cigarette out of the mane knocked it under the "throat" of the saddle from where it rolled under the protruding saddle blanket and started to burn the horse's shoulder.

The horse started to buck, off came the rider and the horse in terror and pain ran into a building and broke its neck. This is not an isolated happening due to smoking on horseback.

The chances of starting a bush-fire by a cigarette-smoking trail rider are numerous. For this reason many trails are closed to riders during the months when these trails would be most enjoyable.

Entering a show ring with a cigarette, cigar or pipe will result in expulsion by the ring master. Few judges light up a cigarette while working in the ring and certainly no experienced ring master would do so.

The Northwest International Horse Show, British Columbia's premier show is this week at the Agradome, Exhibition Park in Vancouver. Tickets including those for Saturday night's performances can be obtained at the Vancouver ticket centre.

Over the last 20 years this show has raised thousands of dollars for various charities. This year faced with higher production costs, the show committee, so rumor had it, were contemplating "no show." Our prediction is that, if there is an international next year, it will take a different format.

A "fun day" is planned this Sunday by the Sooke Saddle Club at the club ring on Otter Point Road starting at 10.

There will be a competition trail ride in the morning — both English and western — and in the afternoon there will be 10 fun games. A horse will not be required for all these games.

On completion of the events a barbecue supper will be served. Cost for the entire day is $2.50 (including supper). Spectators are welcome at no charge with the exception of the supper. There will be door prizes. For more information call 642-5960 or 642-3569.

B.C. Pipe Hearing In November

OTTAWA (FP) — The National Energy Board will start a public hearing on Nov. 12 in Ottawa into the proposal by Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. of Vancouver to construct additional pipeline facilities in northeastern British Columbia, as a part of a promised B.C. campaign to make-up for deficiencies in exports of natural gas to the U.S. Pacific Northwest.

The public hearing will review Westcoast's plans to build $8.2-million worth of new 16-inch-diameter pipeline, 31.4 miles in length, as part of an expansion of the natural gas gathering system in the Helmut gas fields near Fort Nelson in the Peace River District.

Westcoast, which has been unable during the past two winters to meet all of the export commitments, estimates the expansion should add some 220-billion cubic feet of natural gas reserves to the province's delivery system.

The N.E.B. has set an Oct. 31 deadline for interventions on the Westcoast application.

Dental Plan 'Too Costly'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provision of children's dental care through schools by dental nurses would be costly and inefficient, according to the president of the B.C. College of Dental Surgeons.

Proposals for school-based dental care are contained in a recent report to the provincial government but Dr. Robert Hicks said Tuesday the college suggests a public-private system.

Schools would be responsible for the preventive aspect both in education of causes of tooth decay and application of fluoride on the teeth under the college's proposal.

An expansion of the existing dental clinics would deal with the medical aspect, Dr. Hicks said. The clinics would be reimbursed by the government under a dental-care program.

The school-based proposal is one of four contained in the government-sponsored inquiry under Dr. Robert Evans, an economics professor at the University of B.C.

The other three suggestions are for a private practice system like that used in medical health insurance, a public-private system and special community dental clinics for children with staff on salary.

He said the college has estimated it costs Saskatchewan between $180 nd $190 a child for an average amount of treatment while in B.C., going by fee guide used in private practice, it would cost about $78 a child.

Hicks said the difference is the cost to train dental nurses to the level needed if they are to work on their own in a school-based system, and also the loss in productivity by a lone worker compared with the teamwork accomplished in a clinic.

He added that problems would arise for a dental nurse in a school-based system if technical difficulties were encountered during the filling of a child's tooth — "and you don't know about these until the drilling has started."

If the nurse felt the work was getting beyond her competence, the cavity would have to be plugged and arrangements made for the child to be referred to a dentist, said Hicks, while a dentist would be available immediately to supervise or take over if necessary from an assistant working in a clinic setting.

Glare Reduction Tests Planned

Street lighting tests will be carried out on a strip of Royal Oak Drive in an effort to cut down glare near the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain.

Saanich's public works committee Tuesday approved a recommendation by municipal engineer Cliff Warren that three types of lighting be installed.

They are high pressure sodium post-top lamps, mounted on 25-foot steel poles, high pressure sodium post-top lamps mounted on 18-foot steel poles and mercury post-top lamps mounted on 18-foot steel poles.

David Crampton of the observatory has asked Saanich to use high pressure sodium vapor lamps or install yellow filters on mercury vapor lamps because glare from Greater Victoria is interfering with the observatory's studies.

Warren told the committee the high pressure sodium lamps are more expensive than mercury ones but said the savings in energy would more than compensate.

Testing will be carried out for one month in an effort to determine the amount of glare to vehicle drivers and the illumination distribution pattern.

Indians 'May Rampage'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Militant Indians have explosives and are prepared to use them to demonstrate their frustrations over dealing with governments on projects such as northern Manitoba hydro electric development, a clergyman said Tuesday.

Rev. Ernest Willie, an Anglican priest from Toronto, said he has heard talk and seen maps on power line locations that, if sabotaged, could effectively cripple distribution systems.

Speaking during the second day of an interchurch task force hearing into northern hydro development, Rev. Willie said the government must adopt an attitude "that begins to look at my people a little more seriously before the young people decide that they'll go on the rampage."

Concerns of Indians living in the North involve land flooded to facilitate hydro projects such as the Churchill River diversion and the resulting loss of livelihoods and homes.

Rev. Willie said the oppressed can be dealt with by listening to them or waiting for symbolic acts of violence.

Mines Minister Sidney Green, in reply to Rev. Willie's remarks, said Indian people should assert their rights in "the manner they see as most effective for them."

Green, a Jew, alluded to the situations faced by his people in Europe in the past when they lived on reserves, were forbidden to own property and were banned from entering the city.

If those conditions existed today "I would fight to get into the mainstream ... that's what my people did."

"How you deal with it will be your problem."

Green said that while the "democratic process is capable of horrendous crimes," it is probably also the best protection for minorities.

He said the Churchill River project will proceed, not because vast sums of money have already been spent constructing the control structures but "because it's a very sensible, worthwhile project for the people of this province."

It is not correct, he said, to assume the native people would be best left as they have been for 100 years but "I say we should compensate them."

SHAVE RULE TO COURT

NEW HAVEN, CONN. (UPI) — A waitress who was fired for refusing to shave her legs is suing in federal court to get her job back.

Mrs. Judith Quist was fired from the Plaza restaurant in Somers in February of 1974. She took her case to the state human rights commission, which upheld her employer and said she hadn't been discriminated against.

While the decision is being appealed lawyers from the Connecticut Women's Education and Legal Fund have filed a suit based on civil right5s law and 19th century anti-slavery doctrine.

The suit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in New Haven asks that Mrs. Quist be rehired and receive unspecified damages. The suit says recent civil rights law bars discrimination in employment on the basis of sex.

Ann Hill, director of the women's law group, also says requiring a woman to shave her legs is a form of slavery, prohibited by the 13th amendment to the constitution.

"We're saying that forcing a woman to shave her legs is forcing her back into servitude," Ms. Hill said.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	1 ♠	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♥	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

After winning the opening spade lead with dummy's ace (upon which East played the eight), South led the board's singleton trump and finessed his jack when East followed with the three-spot. West took the trick with the queen and cashed the queen of spades, East completing his high-low signal by playing the four. West then gazed at the ceiling for a few moments, trying to figure out South's hand. His reasoning was something like this:

"Judging from the bidding, South probably started with at least six hearts headed by the A-K-J. To have opened and then jumped, he had to have the diamond ace, plus either the queen of diamonds or the king of clubs — and maybe even both.

"We've taken two tricks, and my ace of clubs is the third. I'll cash my ace of clubs and see what happens: maybe I'll get some clue as to whether I should then lead another club, either to my partner's hoped-for king, or perhaps partner will ruff."

So West led the ace of clubs at trick four, and East followed suit with the deuce. West then continued with his analysis:

"Although it may be that my partner was dealt the doubleton K-2 of clubs, I have a feeling that he wasn't. I'm going to forget about clubs. I know that neither my partner nor South has any more spades, but if only my partner has the ten of trumps, we'll be in great shape if he ruffs a spade lead with that card."

And so it came to pass that, after winning trick three with the queen of spades, West led the six of spades (not the high jack). East rose to the occasion and ruffed with the ten of trumps. South overruffed with the king — and at that moment West's nine of trumps became promoted into the setting trick.

Of course declarer could have made his contract by cashing the ace and king of trumps (instead of finessing the jack), and then leading a third heart to West's queen. But it's a moot question as to whether this line of play was the correct one.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, Sept. 25
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on security, obtaining backing from one who encourages your efforts. Cancer, Capricorn could figure in picture. Emphasize courage of convictions. Slight delay could be blessing in disguise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are able to make assets work. You benefit from timing, details, specifics. Persons who were indifferent could flock to your side. Make the most of legitimate offers. Don't back down — you have momentum to "ride to victory."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Changes work in your behalf — you get inside information, visits from those who represent organizations, special groups. Another Gemini is involved. Virgo, Sagittarius persons also are in picture.

CANCER (June 21 July 22): Accent is on meditation and mediation. Diplomacy wins ball game. Means you make friends, influence people — and a loved one purchases luxury item. Professional superior acknowledges your contributions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis is on promotion, decision, romantic interlude, the need to see situations and people as they actually exist. Goal is in sight but you may want to see something else. Need to set course on straight path is more obvious than in recent past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You draw to you persons, situations that had been long ago, far away. Priorities fall into place. You know what should be done — and how to get it done. Means this is a time when the philosophical and the practical successfully blend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get rid of fears regarding costs, leases, insurance. Decision goes in your favor and means money picture will be brighter. You will finish a project or assignment — and you do deserve an accolade.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You make choice between sharing and selfishness. Decision oculd be crucial. Your future happiness might be at stake. Know it and be grown-up about it. What is it you want? That should be the question, not how it looks to others or what impresses other people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You get into areas that are unorthodox. Teaching, learning processes are emphasized. Work, basic achievements also figure prominently. Aquarian might come up with surprise answers, proposals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Curiosity is satisfied. You glimpse truth and can benefit from knowledge. Accent is on creativity, involvement and relationship with very young people. You get support, can put across program and ring sales bell!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Details, basic issues, inner strengths, ability to face facts as they exist — these are spotlighted. If thorough, you win. If not, you repeat steps. If patient, you achieve. If not, you pay through the nose. It is simple, clear and direct — and the choice is DIRECT — and the choice is your own.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Movement, messages, communication with relatives — these are featured. Special calls, messages, notes, mail — these too, affect you in more profound ways than in recent days. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure prominently.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are spiritual, perceptive, psychic, particular, sensitive, temperamental and not easy to live with or to completely comprehend. June was important — you travel in October. Pisces, Virgo persons play key roles in your life. You soon will overcome "emotional mishap," will be free — and "confronted with happiness."

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 1445 for the game today. One 5, two 4's, and one 1. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget regular and repeater decimals, powers and roots (no extra digits). For example, 45 ÷ 4 — 1 is a solution for 48.

111 will be a challenge! It defeated me, but was solved by R. S. Johnson of Montreal. And the limit without a break in continuity seems to be 117. Yesterday's answer: WEEDS was 10085.

The Beat Went On

SKIEN, Norway (AFP) — Peter Brown, a professional disc jockey from London, set a new world record in non-stop disc jockeying in this east Norwegian town at the weekend. The Englishman kept his records spinning for 268 hours without a break, beating the former record of 208 hours.

Broadway Role for City Actor

HOSIE

A Victoria singer-actor will reach Broadway early in 1976.

Bill Hosie, member of a well known city show-biz family, has arrived at the Mecca of most of his kind via Gosley's Smile Show, Montreal's Feux Follets and the Charlottetown Festival.

He is one of only two members of the original cast of the Charlottetown production of Kronborg: 1582, so far to be definitely invited by New York producer Lester Osterman, to play in the Broadway version.

Kronborg, a pop-rock musical based on Shakespeare's Hamlet, recently concluded its second successful season at Charlottetown. Its preview on Broadway will occur Jan. 5 and opening night will be Jan. 27.

Vancouver-based Roma Hearn is the other original cast member who will definitely play on Broadway as Queen Gertrude, the role she created for Charlottetown in the 1974 season.

Hosie's assignment is a triple-header. He will be doing as before, the Player King and the Sexton in the grave-digger scene, but he has also been told that a new calypso-type song is being written for him in another scene.

Bill's dancing-actress wife, Sylvia, says that as the Player King he does a kind of country and western number with strong reverberations of Stompin' Tom Connor and Johnny Cash, while as the Sexton the style is British music hall with a cockney accent.

Cliff Jones is author-composer of the successful musical which was originally commissioned by the CBC and broadcast in 1973.

The Charlottetown production was directed by Alan Lund but the Broadway version is to be directed and choreographed by Gower Champion.

A Long Stroll For Cleric . . .

RICHMOND — Rev. William Rabel, 59, has just completed a 4,000-mile walk from Halifax to help raise money for his church. Rabel, formerly of the Church of God at Richmond, raised $2,000 for cancer research and $7,000 to help retire the mortgage on the church. He left Halifax March 21 and arrived in Richmond on Sunday afternoon.

NEW YORK — A federal court has ordered the freeing of Roy Schuster, a 70-year-old state convict whose complaints over jail corruption led to his confinement in a hospital for the criminally insane for almost 30 years. Judge Irving Kaufman said the "shocking story" of Schuster was "reminiscent of 'the Gulag Archipelago,'" Alexander Solzhenitsyn's chronicle on Soviet prison camps. Schuster was ordered freed from Greenhaven State Prison in Stormville, N.Y., where he has been held since being transferred in 1972 from the Dannemora State Hospital for the criminally insane.

MOSCOW — Chief Air Force Marshal Alexander Golovanov, who flew disgraced military and political leaders to labor camps during Joseph Stalin's purges in the 1930s, has died at the age of 71, the military newspaper Red Star reported today.

WASHINGTON — Susan Ford, the U.S. president's 18-year-old daughter, has been hired as a part-time photographer in the Washington bureau of The Associated Press. She will be on general assignment, fitting her work around her class schedule as a freshman at Mount Vernon College here.

OKLAHOMA CITY — A first-degree murder charge was filed Tuesday in juvenile court against a 15-year-old youth in the shooting death of a fellow pupil during a racial disturbance at Grant High School last week.

James Briggs was ordered held without bond in a juvenile detention facility pending arraignment Oct. 7.

WELLINGTON — Singer-pianist Ray Charles has been refused a visa to enter New Zealand, Immigration Minister Fraser Colman said Tuesday.

Colman would not specify the grounds for the refusal except to say the entertainer did not meet New Zealand's requirements for entry.

KIDNAPPER ESCAPE BID

VALHALLA, N.Y. — Mel Patrick Lynch, accused abductor of Seagram heir Samuel Bronfman, tried unsuccessfully to escape from his maximum security cell at Westchester County jail, authorities said Tuesday.

Lynch and another prisoner, William Rivera were unable to break through a metal window screen and surrendered to a guard they had taken hostage.

Wendy's Parents Lose Their Case

WASHINGTON — A judge Tuesday dismissed the case of a Connecticut couple who alleged that the Unification Church used mind control techniques to hold their 18-year-old daughter against her will. Judge James Belson ruled that the Elton Helanders had not fulfilled their "formidable burden" of establishing that the Unification Church used "impermissible" methods "akin to hypnosis or a systematized program of thought control using fatigue and deprivation of food" to recruit and retain their daughter Wendy.

The Helander's brought suit to force the controversial church, headed by Korean evangelist Sun Myung Moon, to return their daughter to them.

The trial, which Wendy refused to attend, pitted current and former members of the church against each other. Witnesses for the Helanders testified that they worked long hours performing church assignments, were poorly fed, were always in the company of other church members and were too fatigued to reason or to question intelligently church doctrines.

In rebuttal, the church put on the stand several current members who said their activity is voluntary and that they can reject assignments, question orders and dogma, and read or associate with others as they pleased.

Some testified they had been kidnapped by their families to "deprogram" them, an intensive method of convincing them to leave the church.

ANGELA RAPS PATTY

CHICAGO — Patricia Hearst and her "urban guerrilla" comrades are "possibly romantics" who accomplished little in "the real struggle", according to Angela Davis, herself a former fugitive.

Davis said the Hearst heiress should not have "too many problems" when she comes up for trial because "she has the power of the Hearst (publishing) empire behind her."

She said she believed the news media's attention to Patricia Hearst and the Symbionese Liberation Army had been far greater than their importance in "the struggle of oppressed people."

"Robbing a bank in Los Angeles will not free oppressed people; nor will killing a school superintendent in Oakland."

SLA members, Davis said, are "possibly romantics".

"All I could see was a solid wall of FBI agents," Davis said.

She also recalled that Patty's mother "was one of those who voted against me" when she was fired from her teaching job at UCLA by the board of regents.

Lennon Can Stay in U.S.

NEW YORK—John Lennon will be permitted to stay in the United States because his wife, Yoko Ono, is expecting a baby, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization service said Tuesday. Deportation proceedings against him have been suspended.

READY FOR PEAK

KATMANDU (UPI) — A British team has established a camp about 2,000 feet below the top of Mt. Everest. Climbers Dougal Hasten and Doug Scott, who established camp at the 27,200 foot mark, expected to make a final assault today on the 29,028 summit, which has never been climbed by the rocky south face. The campsite is the highest ever established by climbers on the southern route. The 18-member expedition is led by veteran Himalayan climber Cris Bonnington.

LETTER STOLEN

EDMONTON — Eleven-year-old Susan McKenzie of Edmonton was writing a letter to the Queen this morning. It began, "I'm sorry to bother you again, but . . ."

Susan was writing again because Monday afternoon she found an envelope from the Queen torn open on her front lawn. The letter inside was gone.

This summer Susan had written to the Queen asking about the Royal horses because Susan, a horse-lover, had spent part of her summer holidays riding on her uncle's farm. "I just told her we had the same likings because I liked horses and she does too," Susan said.

Susan's mother, said this morning that when her daughter found the envelope minus the letter, "she was really broken-hearted — she was crying." So Susan is writing once more to the Queen, asking for another reply. Police are looking for the person responsible for taking the letter from the mailbox.

Sopranos in Song Program Will Show Voice Traits

Crime-fighters have known for some time that voice-prints are as individual as fingerprints.

But operatic and song literature buffs have been aware far longer, artistically if non-scientifically, that no two voices are exactly alike. In fact the subtle differences in voices of the same general kind were recognized even before Mozart's time.

These fine variations are to a large extent responsible for the fact that one tenor will make a more satisfactory Pinkerton than another of equally superior vocal quality, or that a certain soprano can sing Gilda with more exquisite appeal than another who is fantastic as Lucia.

Victoria song lovers will have an opportunity to observe these individual vocal traits under ideal circumstances at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at McPherson Playhouse.

The program is entitled Sopranos in Song and it is the opening event in the Victoria Musical Art Society season.

The singers are Adele Lewis and Marilyn Wuis who will have as partners at the piano Grace Timp and Jeanne Wood.

Lewis will sing songs by Dr. Arne, Schubert, and Bizet and arias from Aida and Pagliacci.

Together the sopranos will sing the duet, Su'l Aria from Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, and Me Chiamano Norma, from Bellini's Norma.

Both Lewis and Wuis are on the faculty of the vocal department at Victoria Conservatory of Music.

Wuis studied at Mount Allison Conservatory in New Brunswick and was a semi-finalist in the CBC Talent Festival. During that time she sang under Sir Ernest MacMillan with the Halifax Symphony Orchestra.

She has taught singing in New Brunswick and Alberta and been a regular CBC recitalist on both French and English networks before coming to Victoria Conservatory three years ago.

Ford Appeals to World To Prevent N-Terror

VIENNA (AP) — The United States called Tuesday for maximum international co-operation to prevent the use of nuclear materials by terrorists and acts of sabotage against nuclear installations.

The appeal was contained in a message from President Ford to the 19th general conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) that opened here Monday.

In the statement read to the conference, Ford said there were three crucial problem areas in nuclear development — "meeting worldwide energy requirements, preventing the proliferation of nuclear explosive devices for whatever uses and guarding against the theft of nuclear materials for terrorist purposes."

Dr. Robert Seamans, chief of the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), underlined Washington's concern about the possible use of nuclear weapons by terrorist groups to hold the world as their hostage.

Increased study and co-operation is urgently necessary, he said, to meet "the threat every nation faces from the risk of theft of nuclear materials or sabotage of facilities from sub-national groups."

"The growth of the nuclear industry and of terrorist activity has increased the difficulty and made the matter that much more pressing."

Physical security measures must be upgraded and strengthened, he said, "in order that the world community can deal effectively with the full range of potential threats facing it."

The United States strongly favors the establishment of an "international mechanism to develop and maintain a high degree of co-operation in the area of physical security systems," he added.

Glanford Gets Tillicum Road Cash

Saanich council has decided to delete a $222,000 item for roadwork on Tillicum from the Trans Canada Highway to Carey in the Nov. 15 public works referendum.

Instead for the same amount, work will be done on Glanford from Carey to McKenzie.

The switch was made at the suggestion of municipal engineer Cliff Warren because it is improbable that the provincial department of highways will be able to complete the McKenzie link to the Trans Canada Highway in less than three years.

Warren said the work on Glanford will include widening the road from 24 feet to 46 feet, construction of curbs, gutters and sidewalks and street lighting.

The work will also improve conditions at the Glanford-McKenzie intersection.

Mayor Ed Lum said the police department is "very concerned with that corner. It is a congested corner. The parents of children going to McKenzie school are also concerned."

Soviets Propose Test Ban

UNITED NATIONS (WP) — The Soviet Union Tuesday proposed an international agreement banning the development and manufacture of new weapons of mass destruction and called for a treaty to ban all nuclear tests.

In his statement to the United Nations General Assembly Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko remained faithful to what has becom something of a Soviet tradition to introduce at least one disarmament proposal. The annual effort to appear to be at the forefront of world disarmament is seen by Westerners here as a propaganda ploy.

The proposed prohibition on the devleopment of weapons of mass destruction formalizes a suggestion made June 13 by Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev, who asked for a ban on weapons "even more terrifying than existing nuclear weapons."

At the time it was not known in the West what weapons Brezhnev had in mind, and Bromyko did not say Tuesday. The draft Gromyko presented notes that the new types of weapons of mass annihilation and new systems of such weapons would be "specified through negotiations on the subject."

The test-ban proposal, as usual, contains no indication that the Soviet Union would agree to on-site inspection, which the United States considers necessary to verify compliance. Comprehensive test-ban proposals have been before the Geneva Disarmament conference ever since it began in 1962. The problem of verification has never been solved.

In the negotiations for a ban on underground tests of more than 150 kilotons, U.S. officials have said that the Soviet Union is prepared to have on-site inspection of some peaceful nuclear explosions. Whether this readiness would carry over to on-site inspection for a comprehensive ban was unclear, but Secretary of State Henry Kissinger told the General Assemply Tuesday that the negotiations setting a threshold on underground testing constitute a significat step "toward a verifiable another arms-control measure comprehensive test-ban."

British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan put forward Tuesday, calling on all members of the United Nations to pledge not to divert nuclear materials to military use.

BOY STARVING IN THE STREET

VANCOUVER (CP) — An eight-year-old boy, half-starved and begging for money but ignored by most passersby, was in satisfactory condition in hospital Tuesday.

John Lynn, spokesman for the Vancouver resources board which is responsible for children's welfare in the city, said Tuesday that formal application will be made Thursday for custody of the boy.

The boy, without shoes and socks, his belly bloated from the effects of starvation, was found in Kitsilano Saturday morning by John Christian and Stephanie Tofield who saw the boy begging from passersby.

Christian said they became concerned because "he was very, very sick and people were just passing. The only tint on his cheeks were greenish bruises on eac htemple," he said. "The boy was suffering exposure after having spent some nights alone, outside, sleeping under trees.

"He acted just like he was dying," said Christian.

They brought the boy a pint of milk "which he just gulped down . . . he was confused and kind of collapsed."

They had him taken to hospital and called police. Since then, said Tofield, they had visited the boy in hospital, but on Monday were told that such visits were no longer permitted.

Lynn said the boy was "very definitely suffering from lack of food, very visibly showing that he also has tooth problems."

"This is one of the most dramatic cases of child abuse that we have dealt with in the last half-year," he said.

Lynn said social workers have contacted the mother and have found that there are no other children at risk. He said resource board officials were not contemplating laying criminal charges, a move not within their terms of reference.

A police spokesman said the matter is being left to welfare officials. Lynn said the boy has been placed under the protection of children act and will be "a considerable time in hospital."

GAS CUT LAY-OFFS MOUNT

Emergency in Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Emergency resources were alerted today to care for people left without heat and cooking facilities when the Vancouver Island Gas Co. ran out of fuel Tuesday afternoon.

Mayor Frank Ney said today more than 1,000 persons employed in restaurants, hotels and other businesses relying on gas had been laid off because of a dispute that has so far cut domestic gas of 1,500 users

Ney said about 500 elderly persons rely on gas. It there is a sudden drop in temperature he expected all elderly persons in difficulty would be evacuated.

Ald. James Moffatt, in charge of council's emergency plan, said a large mobile kitchen was ready to supply meals to several hundred people an hour and Provincial Emergency Program (PEP) officials assured him that another kitchen van is available from Powell River if necessary.

Moffatt said PEP had authorized putting the Nanaimo group on standby, and Ney said he and the council had authority to send it into action at provincial government expense.

Ney said Vancouver Island Gas had closed because its supply of gas had been exhausted. The other companies still going but with short supplies are: Canadian Propane Gas and Oil, CIGAS products, Northwest Propane and Coastal Propane.

Nanaimo council has asked for government intervention, but TRL president Carl Anshelm said the companies do not seek it.

Agriculture Minister David Stupich said both sides in the labor-management impasse must agree to third party intervention before the government can act.

Ney meanwhile declared only the government can act to restore gas supplies in the face of the stalemate involving five propane gas suppliers and three Teamsters Union locals.

Gas Hike Of 52% Nov. 1

Times News Serives

Canadian natural gas prices are due to rise by 52 per cent on Nov. 1 as a result of an Ottawa-Alberta agreement announced today in Edmonton.

Energy Ministers Donald Macdonald of Ottawa and Don Getty of Alberta reaffirmed in a three-hour session that the wholesale price in Toronto will increase at that date to $1.25 from 82 cents a thousand cubic feet.

Macdonald said the action of the two governments in effect overrules a provincial arbitation board award that would have increased the Toronto wholesale price to $1.52 a thousand cubic feet, an increase of 85 per cent.

The federal Petroleum Administration Act, giving Ottawa power to set interprovincial prices, will be used with Alberta's approval to put the new price in effect nationally.

Getty said new provincial natural gas marketing legislation will be introduced in November to allow the province to hold down its domestic prices as well.

"It means the price proposed by the arbitation board will not go into effect Nov. 1," Getty said following a meeting in the proivncial legislature buildings.

Macdonald said going into the meeting the federal government would have been forced to take "unilateral action" under the price-fixing legislation if agreement with the province was not possible.

The two governments reached an understanding in June on the $1.25 price for gas delivered in Toronto, a 52-percent increase that would add $65 to the average homeowners annual fuel bill of $264.

POUND SINKS TO NEW LOW

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar continued to climb today on Europe's money markets. The British pound fell to a new low while gold made a modest rally.

The pound dropped to $2.03, while across the English Channel the dollar was selling for 2.6747 West German marks, 2.7357 Swiss francs and 4.5862 French francs.

OLD BRIC-A-BRAC, including ancient curly park benches and lamp standards, may soon be put on the block by the city. Now stored at the Garbally Road yard, Ald. Sam Bawlf suggested Tuesday the ancient pieces could be sold at a mammoth garage auction, or sale, the proceeds to be used for decorative touches to the Government Street mall and other areas. 'Sell-Out' Claimed In Wood Talks Wake

Charges of "selling out" and counter charges of "irresponsibility" flew between union leaders Tuesday following the breakdown in forest industry talks.

The last vestige of a unified union front was wiped away as pulp unions withdrew from mediation efforts and the International Woodworkers of America agreed to struggle on in attempts to win a settlement.

Tense and tired after seven straight days of talks under the eye of provincially-appointed mediators, the union leaders broke their "no comment" pacts and criticized each other's positions.

Nanaimo Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada leader Bruce Tunstall, asked if the pulp union caucuses had discussed the IWA bargaining position, retorted: "We know their position. They'll sell out for anything they can get."

Later in the day, after pulp union negotiators had already left their hotel rooms to head for home, IWA leader Jack Munro charged they were irresponsible in walking out of the talks "when we've got 40,000 people out of work."

Tunstall said the PPWC and the other pulp union, the Canadian Paperworkers Union, had come closer together in their bargaining positions in the last few days.

He said the decision to walk out of the talks was unanimous.

CPU president Art Gruntman said the pulp workers were withdrawing from rhe talks "in order to give the IWA and the employers an opportunity to reach an agreement."

PPWC president Reg Ginn said the pulp workers had already modified their contract demands "right out of the ballpark" and Gruntman added that the employers "never really did bargain this year."

Postal Workers Lose Lawsuit

OTTAWA (CP) — A shoe manufacturing company located in Sherbrooke, Que., has been awarded $1,000 in damages to be paid by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers in a provincial court decision.

The award arises out of the 16-day illegal strike held by postal worker sin April, 1974.

A spokesman for the national headquarters of the union said Tuesday that the union will have to look at the decision, the first won by businesses, to decide whether to appeal.

The firm is Santana Inc., a firm which sells shoes for women directly to retail stores, chain stores and to distributors located across the country.

The company uses postal services to send order requests to its customers, who then return the forms in the mail.

Santana said it had to borrow money from banks in order to continue operations and was forced to use more costly private courier, telephone and telegram services to stay in business.

In its submission to the Sherbrooke court, the company noted that its business volume dropped from $184,765 in March to $85,520 in April, the month of the national walkout. Its income rose to $162,918 in May.

The losses occurred directly because of the illegal action of the union, the company maintained.

At the time of the walkout, which resulted from a dispute over technological change, the postal workers had a collective agreement.

Judge Jean-Louis Peloquin, in his judgment, said the union encouraged the walkouts, rather than prohibiting them, by calling a national strike by locals that were still working on April 19.

Judge Peloquin said if there had been an involuntary delay in the mail, the union could not have been held responsible any more than the postmaster-general.

But he added that in the case before the court the union had "voluntarily paralyzed the mail system in the different post offices in Canada by their illegal work stoppage.

Two Dead In Boat Mishap

A Vancouver man is in satisfactory condition but two of his companions are dead after a boating mishap on the mainland this morning.

In satisfactory condition at Vancouver General Hospital is Randy T. Buhr, 22. Dead are R. A. Klyne, 45, and his 16-year-old son Calvin Alexander.

The trio went fishing in a 14-foot aluminum boat Tuesday and were reported missing Tuesday evening.

A search was launched at daybreak today and at 7 a.m. Buhr was found clinging to the upturned boat by the coast guard cutter Mallard, approximately four miles south of the Sand Heads light.

Delta police said he had been clinging to the boat since 1 a.m.

It was while he was being transported in an armed forces Labrador helicopter to Vancouver that the body of the youth was spotted by the helicopter's crew.

Police DON'T Earn More Than in New York, Detroit

"We're already paying them (Victoria policemen) more than Detroit and New York," Pollen had said, representing this "fact" as one of the council's justifications in rejecting the police board wage offer of 22.3 per cent, which would have meant Victoria-Saanich police parity.

But the Times has learned that New York and Detroit policemen are earning more per year than Victoria police are earning at the moment or would earn if council gave them parity with Saanich.

First-class constables (three or more years of service) in Victoria are presently receiving $13,248 a year.

In New York, police are receiving $16,470 per year, a New York police spokesman said. This is $3,222 more than Victoria.

Officer Mike Bossuyt of Detroit police said policemen with three years of service there are earning $16,200 — $2,952 more than Victoria police.

For every additional five years of service, New York policemen receive a salary increase of $100; in Victoria, police receive $5 a month increase for every five additional years of service.

A Victoria policeman who has served on the force for 20 years earns $13,488. New York policemen with the same number of years service earn $16,870 and Detroit policemen $17,292 plus.

The president of the Victoria police union said Pollen's claims about Detroit and New York police wages were refuted by the union months ago in negotiations.

Automobile Top Killer

PARIS (Reuter) — The automobile has killed 25 million persons since its invention, a toll exceeding all the deaths in wars this century, says Norbet Tiemann, U.S. federal highway administrator.

"The appalling fact in that since the automobile came into existence it has killed more than 25 million people in the world. That is more than the 23.5 million deaths in wars around the world in the same period."

NEWS BRIEFS

20 Die in Crash

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — An Indonesian jetliner crashed in flames today during landing on the island of Sumatra, killing 20 of the 61 persons aboard. Airline officials said the Garuda Indonesian Airways plane ran into "adverse conditions" on landing at the city of Palembang in southern Sumatra.

Eloise Moves On

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Tropical storm Eloise, now a weakening mass of strong winds and heavy rain, pushed far inland today, leaving a trail of wreckage and shattered buildings along the Florida panhandle. Eloise, downgraded from a hurricane as it rolled into Tennessee, West Virginia and Pennsylvania early today, brought heavy rain and flash flood alerts to much of the northeast.

Challenge in Lisbon

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Communist-led steel workers called a one-hour strike today in the first major challenge to Portugal's new socialist-dominated coalition cabinet. Leaders of the steel and metal workers union ordered workers to walk off their jobs this morning to warn the coalition against slowing down Portugal's move to the left.

Violence in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Rival Christian and Moslem militias battled on the outskirts of Beirut today and snipers terrorized most of the embattled capital. A government spokesman said army troops would intervene in a limited, noncombatant role to help the undermanned internal security forces cope with the city-wide violence.

B.C.'s Sasquatch Makes It Big in U.S. Atlas

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — British Columbia's legendary sasquatch is featured in an atlas recently published by the United States government.

The sasquatch is on Page 53 of the "Washington Environmental Atlas" a $48 publication of the U S. Army Corps of Engineers.

According to the text, illustrated with a drawing of a tall, hairy, ape-like creature, the FBI has investigated the monster, which has been sighted in Oregon, California, the Soviet Union and South America as well as B.C.

"Alleged sasquatch hair samples inspected by FBIlaboratories resulted in the conclusion that no such hair exists on any human or presently-known animal for which such data are available," the Washington state atlas says.

But the FBI iitself cannot recall such an investigation, says an official of the corp of engineers environmental resources division in Seattle, which supervised the book's preparation.

"The FBI called us today. 'Did we really do that.' " said the official.

No trace has been found of such a lab report, the official added.

The reference was written by a Bob Maury, who has since left the corps' Seattle office. Attempts to locate him to check it out have been unsuccessful, the official said.

"It is part of the lore of the Pacific northwest which the people who worked on the atlas felt should be in," the official said of the sasquatch.

"A lot of conservationists felt some reference should be included. This is not a reflection of the corps' feeling, necessarily." The atlas notes that the sasquatch has been "sighted" 89 times in B.C. — more than anywhere else.

But California has the most reports of "sasquatch tracks" at 82, with B.C. second at 38.

"The very existence of sasquatch, or big foot as it is sometimes known, is hotly disputed," the atlas says. "Some profess to be open-minded about the matter, although stating that not one piece of evidence will withstand serious scientific scrutiny.

Others, because of a particular incident or totality of reports over the years, are convinced that sasquatch is a reality."

The book describes a composite picture, based on reports, of "an ape-like creature, standing between eight and 12 feet tall, weighing in excess of 1,000 pounds, and taking strides of up to six feet."

A map shows the location of U.S. sightings and tracks and a table compiles a total of 497 sasquatch reports.

"If sasquatch is purely legendary, the legend is likely to be a long time in dying," says the atlas. "On the other hand, if sasquatch does exist, then with the sasquatch hunts being mounted, and the increasing human population, it seems likely that some hard evidence may soon be in hand."

The atlas, "which otherwise contains many scientific facts," an official said, can be purchased at U.S. government printing office bookstores.

The Seattle bookstore has had to order more copies after selling its first 100 atlases.

The atlas took three years to prepare and is described as being a comprehensive environmental inventory of Washingto state.

IF A PICTURE is worth 1,000 words, can it be worth $2,000 as well? Ceremonial presentation last week by MLA Jim Gorst (second from right) to regional directors Dick Emery, Mac Tipton and Earl Pallister was to mark turnover of $74,700 grant from province toward Juan de Fuca curling rink. It came three months after cheques were issued. In fact Gorst said he inadvertently brought wrong cheque. The one in picture is for $1,600 grant towards Little League baseball in James Bay.

Gorst's Tardiness Blamed For Loss of Nearly $2,000

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst cost the taxpayers almost $2,000 in loan interest by taking three months to deliver two provincial government grant cheques, Premier Barrett was told today.

In a letter to the premier, regional board chairman Jim Campbell offered these details on the cost of Gorst's tardiness:

The provincial government issued two cheques, each for $37,350 and dated May 30 and June 12, payable to the Capital Regional District as part of a grant towards construction of the Juan de Fuca curling rink.

"We have determined that they were mailed to (Gorst) on 20th June," Campbell's letter says, "but . . . were not received here until 16 September. This was the day following a ceremonial presentation . . . by Mr. Gorst.

"The delay in receipt of these funds has required our temporary bank financing to meet payment obligations. Interest in the interim is calculated to be $1,897.

"This amount represents a 'lost cost' which will be capitalized in our total project costs. It is simply an unnecessary contribution to the bankers out of recreation funds."

In his letter, Campbell says he appreciates that a local MLA, who may have had a role in the applicaton for such funds, may be entitled to some recognition.

"May I suggest however," he says to Barrett, "that unless you can be assured that the MLA is capable of handling cheques efficiently, you might adopt a policy of forwarding grant funds promptly and directly to the beneficiary, and sending the MLA a facsimile which would be quite as satisfactory for ceremonial purposes."

Gorst said today that a check of his office records show he got the cheques July 22.

"Then I was away from time to time . . . and it takes time to make arrangements, get people together.

"I've got a bigger job than Jim Campbell's got, and a hell of a lot more to do."

Speeders 'Laughing' As Tickets Tripled

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

"They just aren't afraid of getting points anymore . . . and believe it or not they aren't taking heed of warning about the crackdown on speeders."

The crackdown was launched last week by the Saanich force in an effort to halt dangerous driving.

Owens said that the new system of demerit points, introduced by the provincial government along with the Insurance Corporation of B.C., is one of the main contributors to increased speeding, especially along the Pat Bay Highway.

The inspector said that the number of tickets issued since his force started the crackdown last week has tripled, but people are still speeding.

Under the demerit point system a driver is penalized up to $400 when paying for a drivers' certificate for obtaining the maximum 20 demerit points. A total of three demerit points is issued for each speeding infraction.

"But drivers can add up a total of 60 demerit points before their licences are actually suspended and it doesn't make any difference to the total penalty," said Owens.

Under the old system, however, the motorist could be charged heavily for insurance premiums based on the driving record, and in addition to point penalties, police could issue fines with speeding tickets.

Owens suggested the number of drivers with the maximum demerit points is increasing and police checks seem to indicate they've gone over the maximum before their licences are actually suspended.

Problems with the Motor-Vehicle Branch computer may in part cause the time lag, he said.

Saanich police have started a new procedure to speed up the suspension process. The police check with the branch every time they stop a driver whose point total has hit the maximum.

MVB superintendent of driver suspension, Rip Repasse, said today the number of licence suspensions this year has increased about 25 per cent — some 6,000 driver suspensions.

When the branch becomes aware the demerit point maximum has been reached, a notice of intent is issued to the driver warning of licence suspension.

Repasse said the system allows the individual to make a submission to the superintendent of motor-vehicles, in which case the drivers' file is then reviewed.

If no submission is made a final notice is sent out.

If a driver fails to acknowledge the notice, a sheriff or police officer is sent to the driver's home.

Benefits of the system, said Repasse, are that the person who has the demerit points pays the penalty in a higher drivers' certificate charge. It's tied to his licence rather than an insurance premium.

"It's more equitable."

Asked if he feels that a higher fine for demerit points would accomplish a decrease in speeding, he said "that's something you'd have to inquire with ICBC. They base the charge on what they feel rather than what we feel."

In Saanich, patrol checks are being stepped up on a 24-hour basis: the force's three radar cars are on duty and the former policy of giving warning tickets to first offenders has been scrapped.

POLICE HUNT GUN-WIELDER

Police are looking for a homemade campertruck whose driver forced two U.S. tourists off the Malahat highway Tuesday and later threatened them with a rifle.

The elderly tourists, unhurt in the incident, said the driver pointed a .30-.30 rifle and told them to get away after they overtook him near Goldstream Park.

They were unable to get his licence number as he sped off toward Victoria because the plate was dirty, they said.

A third party reported the incident to Colwood RCMP at 4:25 p.m., and police were alerted to look for the 1964-67 brown Ford camper with a rounded top and smashed back door.

$18,000 for Home She Can't Live In

She appealed to Saanich council's public works committee Tuesday for assistance.

The problem is that since August, 1970, the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health has refused to allow the house to be occupied because the lot is too small for a septic tank and other sewage problems.

Development engineer J. R. Walker said rejection notices for occupancy had been given five times since the initial one, the last time as late as November, 1974.

Chairman Ald. Sandy Noel suggested Mrs. De Ochoa should seek legal advice.

She said today she is not interested in getting her money back at this point but would rather find some way of receiving official permission to live in the house.

She said she had no idea that occupancy of the house was impossible when she bought from Sawyer Enterprises Ltd. She was not given this information by Sawyer, she claimed.

Without a home, she and her daughter have been living in a motel at $23 a night. Now a friend has sublet his home to her until Oct. 25.

She came to Canada from Spain seven years ago and works as a secretary to support herself and her daughter.

"The house is very small, 500 square feet, and very run down," she said. "That's why it was so cheap, I thought. Still, if I got my money back I would still be without a home."

She said, after she bought the house she was told by neighbors that it hadn't been occupied for seven years.

Sawyer could not be reached for comment this morning.

Prison Assault Denied

Victoria police Inspector Lyle Somers denied four Wilkinson Road inmates were assaulted by guards at the city jail Tuesday when brought in for provincial court.

His statement came after the inmates appearing for statutory remand told Judge D. K. McAdam they had been "accosted unjustly".

"It appears it was a case of seeking publicity," Somers said. "As far as I can determine there was no incident. The allegations have been checked into, and I find no basis for them."

Another prisoner appearing in afternoon court told McAdam: "What you heard here wasn't true."

CITY MAN KILLED

Steven Parkes, 24, son of George Parkes of 224 Howe, died early Tuesday morning in a car-truck collision two and a half miles west of Keremeos.

The head-on collision occurred shortly after midnight, said Keremeos RCMP. The truck driver, Joseph Engles of Westbank, was treated at hospital and released.

Teacher Bargaining Ready to Go Oct. 2

First salary bargaining talks between lower Vancouver Island teachers and school trustees have been tentatively set for Oct. 2, teachers' spokesman Frank Mather said today.

The meeting will be held in Greater Victoria school board offices, he said.

Five school districts will be included in the regional bargaining zone, which was set up under legislation passed at the spring session of the legislature.

The sixth district scheduled to be in the zone, Lake Cowichan, will bargain at the local level at the request of its teachers.

Teachers and trustees normally bargain together until mid-October, when a conciliator is called in to help.

Our Man in Cutlets Wasn't Exactly Licking His Chops

We're back in Courtenay and it's 6:25 on Tuesday evening.

To me, the seconds ticking their way toward 6:30 are like the countdown for another Apollo space shot or those awful moments before you have to take the stage on opening night.

My Saturday column dealt with genial Courtenay butcher Bill Wheten and his staff and the warmth behind their weekly "Old Folks' Night" when 100 or so old age pensioners flock to Central Meats each Tuesday evening to buy at cost.

We, when I approached Bill, he suggested the best way to get the "inside story" would be to slip on an apron and go behind the counter and sell meat, thereby learning first-hand exactly how the old folk felt about the scheme.

Thanks Bill.

Seemed a good idea when I was in Victoria. Now I'm up here and there are only five minutes left before the doors are flung open, I'm not so sure.

It's tense in the back room at Central Meats. So far, there's only Bill, his wife Michele and me. And Bill says we need six-four on the counter, one on the cash register and one to do a bit of extra cutting out back—plus one on the door to let the customers in at about 10 at a time.

Each Tuesday night, a couple of the eight staff members come back to help out (without pay, of course).

"I never ask them — they

max low

work it out themselves," says Bill.

And there are usually three or four volunteers.

But here we are this Tuesday night, just about ready to start and I'm the only volunteer. Marvellous.

Bill's an obvious student of human nature but he didn't need to be too astute to relize I was being plagued by feelings of my own inadequacy.

"Don't worry," he implored. "Everyone who started, started just as you started."

That's fine, but right now I was wishing like hell I hadn't said I'd ever get started!

"Volunteers come in here and don't know a T-bone from a chop," says Bill, Still trying to soothe my nerves, "But it's a great way to watch and see how they handle people. In fact, I've got three former volunteers on my regular staff now."

Then, with the crowd swelled to about 35 to 40 out front, the back door opened and in came three more of my co-workers. Thank Heaven.

Time had run out. It was 6:30 and Jean Henderson was letting the first lot in the front door. We filed in behind the counter and for those mad first few minutes, I was lost. I just sort of hovered in the background, desperately trying to get out of the way.

At last I plucked up enough courage to try to serve my first customer.

"Can I help you?" I ventured, feeling extremely doubtful that I could, in fact, help anyone.

"Yes, I'd like a nice piece of sirloin steak, please."

Now that sounds simple enough. But it's not. It might look simple enough from your side of the counter. But try it the other way round.

Now bacon I can tell at a glance but one kind of steak looks like every other kind of steak to me and, you see, all the little labels are facing the customers. So you twist your body like a contortionist trying to read the type of meat and the price. Or you slide open the glass doors and turn each label round to read it, and while doing that risk getting your arm caught by a zealous co-worker looking for something a little further up the counter.

Even when you have finally located the sirloin steak, it's still not easy for a novice. I, for one, don't know a nice piece from a nasty piece.

But just as I was contemplating this, Bill Wheten stepped in and rescued me with his easy-going manner.

"This piece all right, love?" he asked and he got big grin in return.

There are, however, many other problems.

Like, I don't know if you've ever tried reading along the line — one of countless lines — on scales? I thought my eyesight was all right until I tried that. And I still don't know what a five-cent variation is.

You might think wrapping is simple enough, too, but the only wrapping up I've done is the kind one does on Christmas Eve and I'm afraid several elderly customers left the shop carrying packages of meat that looked more like gifts.

But the dear old customers more than made up for all my discomfort with their patience and understanding.

They come to shop . . . for meat and friendship

Like Mrs. Clifford, who told me she was 90 ("and I still do my garden") and then laughed gaily while I chased three circular frozen veal cutlets madly around the floor.

My next customer asked why the veal cutlets (I seem to have become the veal cutlet man by now) were dearer this Tuesday than they were last Tuesday. Oh boy!

I looked around helplessly but Bill was there again.

"Oh the prices go back and forth, dear," he told her.

"Mostly forth, I'd say," she countered. But she stayed long enough to buy two pounds and to tell how her husband had had a meat shop in Saskatchewan.

"He'd been a good cutter in his day, but he'd passed on now," Bill recalled later. "And that was what she wanted to say but she didn't know how to say it."

In all it was a delightful evening. To work alongside people like Bill Wheten and Ken Taylor, a part-time butcher who works the rest of the time as a cook at CFB Comox, and to see the happiness they bring to the old people of Courtenay, was a joy.

Just after 6:30, I had longed desperately for the time to pass. Now, 90 minutes and 85 customers later, I wished the night would go on.

BOY STARVING IN THE STREET

VANCOUVER (CP) — An eight-year-old boy, half-starved and begging for money but ignored by most passersby, was in satisfactory condition in hospital Tuesday.

John Lynn, spokesman for the Vancouver resources board which is responsible for children's welfare in the city, said Tuesday that formal application will be made Thursday for custody of the boy.

The boy, without shoes and socks, his belly bloated from the effects of starvation, was found in Kitsilano Saturday morning by John Christian and Stephanie Tofield who saw the boy begging from passersby.

Christian said they became concerned because "he was very, very sick and people were just passing. The only tint on his cheeks were greenish bruises on each temple," he said. "The boy was suffering exposure after having spent some nights alone, outside, sleeping under trees.

"He acted just like he was dying," said Christian.

They brought the boy a pint of milk "which he just gulped down . . . he was confused and kind of collapsed."

They had him taken to hospital and called police. Since then, said Tofield, they had visited the boy in hospital, but on Monday were told that such visits were no longer permitted.

Lynn said the boy was "very definitely suffering from lack of food, very visibly showing that he also has tooth problems."

"This is one of the most dramatic cases of child abuse that we have dealt with in the last half-year," he said.

Lynn said social workers have contacted the mother and have found that there are no other children at risk. He said resource board officials were not contemplating laying criminal charges, a move not within their terms of reference.

A police spokesman said the matter is being left to welfare officials. Lynn said the boy has been placed under the Protection of Children Act and will be "a considerable time in hospital."

GAS CUT LAY-OFFS MOUNT

Emergency in Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Emergency resources were alerted today to care for people left without heat and cooking facilities when the Vancouver Island Gas Co. ran out of fuel Tuesday afternoon.

Mayor Frank Ney said today more than 1,000 persons employed in restaurants, hotels and other businesses relying on gas had been laid off because of a dispute that has so far cut domestic gas of 1,500 users.

Ney said about 500 elderly persons rely on gas. It there is a sudden drop in temperature he expected all elderly persons in difficulty would be evacuated.

Ald. James Moffatt, in charge of council's emergency plan, said a large mobile kitchen was ready to supply meals to several hundred people an hour and Provincial Emergency Program (PEP) officials assured him that another kitchen van is available from Powell River if necessary.

Moffatt said PEP had authorized putting the Nanaimo group on standby, and Ney said he and the council had authority to send it into action at provincial government expense.

Ney said Vancouver Island Gas had closed because its supply of gas had been exhausted. The other companies still going but with short supplies are: Canadian Propane Gas and Oil, CIGAS products, Northwest Propane and Coastal Propane.

Nanaimo council has asked for government intervention, but TLR president Carl Anshelm said the companies do not seek it.

Agriculture Minister David Stupich said both sides in the labor-management impasse must agree to third party intervention before the government can act.

Ney meanwhile declared only the government can act to restore gas supplies in the face of the stalemate involving five propane gas suppliers and three Teamsters Union locals.

Gas Hike Of 52% Nov. 1

Times News Serives

Canadian natural gas prices are due to rise by 52 per cent on Nov. 1 as a result of an Ottawa-Alberta agreement announced today in Edmonton.

Energy Ministers Donald Macdonald of Ottawa and Don Getty of Alberta reaffirmed in a three-hour session that the wholesale price in Toronto will increase at that date to $1.25 from 82 cents a thousand cubic feet.

Macdonald said the action of the two governments in effect overrules a provincial arbitation board award that would have increased the Toronto wholesale price to $1.52 a thousand cubic feet, an increase of 85 per cent.

The federal Petroleum Administration Act, giving Ottawa power to set interprovincial prices, will be used with Alberta's approval to put the new price in effect nationally.

Getty said new provincial natural gas marketing legislation will be introduced in November to allow the province to hold down its domestic prices as well.

"It means the price proposed by the arbitation board ing in the provincial legisla- will not go into effect Nov. 1," Getty said following a meet- ture buildings.

Macdonald said going into the meeting the federal government would have been forced to take "unilateral action" under the price-fixing legislation if agreement with the province was not possible.

The two governments reached an understanding in June on the $1.25 price for gas delivered in Toronto, a 52-percent increase that would add $65 to the average homeowners annual fuel bill of $264.

POUND SINKS TO NEW LOW

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar continued to climb today on Europe's money markets. The British pound fell to a new low while gold made a modest rally.

The pound dropped to $2.03, while across the English Channel the dollar was selling for 2.6747 West German marks, 2.7357 Swiss francs and 4.5862 French francs.

OLD BRIC-A-BRAC, including ancient curly park benches and lamp standards, may soon be put on the block by the city. Belinda Backwell takes stock. Ald. Sam Bawlf suggested Tuesday the ancient pieces could be sold at a mammoth garage auction, or sale, the proceeds to be used for decorative touches to the Government Street mall and other areas. 'Sell-Out' Claimed In Wood Talks Wake

Charges of "selling out" and counter charges of "irresponsibility" flew between union leaders Tuesday following the breakdown in forest industry talks.

The last vestige of a unified union front was wiped away as pulp unions withdrew from mediation efforts and the International Woodworkers of America agreed to struggle on in attempts to win a settlement.

Tense and tired after seven straight days of talks under the eye of provincially-appointed mediators, the union leaders broke their "no comment" pacts and criticized each other's positions.

Nanaimo Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada leader Bruce Tunstall, asked if the pulp union caucuses had discussed the IWA bargaining position, retorted: "We know their position. They'll sell out for anything they can get."

Later in the day, after pulp union negotiators had already left their hotel rooms to head for home, IWA leader Jack Munro charged they were irresponsible in walking out of the talks "when we've got 40,000 people out of work."

Tunstall said the PPWC and the other pulp union, the Canadian Paperworkers Union, had come closer together in their bargaining positions in the last few days.

He said the decision to walk out of the talks was unanimous.

CPU president Art Gruntman said the pulp workers were withdrawing from the talks "in order to give the IWA and the employers an opportunity to reach an agreement."

PPWC president Reg Ginn said the pulp workers had already modified their contract demands "right out of the ballpark" and Gruntman added that the employers "never really did bargain this year."

Police Reject Arbitration

Victoria police union president Pat Braiden has ruled out arbitration recommended today by the Victoria Police Board to resolve the differences between the city and its policemen.

Instead, he indicated that the situation might be forced through some form of "job action" including a strike, work-to-rule, study sessions or speed-up (ticketing the public).

"Pollen's playing with the lives of the public and if that's the sort of game he wants to play, we'll play it." Braiden said after the board, chaired by Mayor Peter Pollen, voted to ask city council to make the arbitration bid to avoid confrontation between the union and the city.

"There's no doubt we'll do it. I haven't met one man here who feels differently," said Braiden.

Pollen said rather than the regular form of arbitration under the Labor Code he would like to see some form of independent tribunal which would consider all aspects of the settlement and its financial impact on the community.

The normal type of arbitrator appointed he claimed, is so biased in favor of unions that the exercise proves "rather useless" as far as municipal employers are concerned.

Today's threat of a strike or other form of disruptive action by city policemen will likely show in the outcome of a membership meeting scheduled for Thursday night.

Braiden rejected a Tuesday suggestion by city council that a 22.3 per cent increase in all categories form the basis for fresh negotiations between the police board and the union. He said that would still leave sergeants and lower ranks from three to 12 per cent behind their Saanich counterparts, which was "totally unacceptable.

"The least we will accept is total parity with Saanich . . . and the offer must be made by Friday morning," he said.

If a strike vote is taken at Thursday's meeting and the 72-hour strike notice is posted immediately, Victoria could have a police strike on its hands as early as Sunday midnight.

POLLEN 'FACTS' WRONG

Victoria policemen do not earn more than their counterparts in New York and Detroit as Mayor Peter Pollen claimed Tuesday, the Times learned today.

"We're already paying them (Victoria policemen) more than Detroit and New York," Pollen had said, representing this "fact" as one of the council's justifications in rejecting the police board wage offer of 22.3 per cent, which would have meant Victoria-Saanich police parity.

But the Times has learned that New York and Detroit policemen are earning more per year than Victoria police are earning at the moment or would earn if council gave them parity with Saanich.

First-class constables (three or more years of service) in Victoria are presently receiving $13,248 a year.

In New York, police are receiving $16,470 per year, a New York police spokesman said. This is $3,222 more than Victoria.

Officer Mike Bossuyt of Detroit police said policemen with three years of service there are earning $16,200 — $2,952 more than Victoria police.

A Victoria policeman who has served on the force for 20 years earns $13,488. New York policemen with the same number of years service earn $16,870 and Detroit policemen $17,292 plus.

20 Die in Crash

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — An Indonesian jetliner crashed in flames today during landing on the island of Sumatra, killing 20 of the 61 persons aboard. Airline officials said the Garuda Indonesian Airways plane ran into "adverse conditions" on landing at the city of Palembang in southern Sumatra.

Eloise Moves On

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Tropical storm Eloise, now a weakening mass of strong winds and heavy rain, pushed far inland today, leaving a trail of wreckage and shattered buildings along the Florida panhandle. Eloise, downgraded from a hurricane as it rolled into Tennessee, West Virginia and Pennsylvania early today, brought heavy rain and flash flood alerts to much of the northeast.

Challenge in Lisbon

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Communist-led steel workers called a one-hour strike today in the first major challenge to Portugal's new socialist-dominated coalition cabinet. Leaders of the steel and metal workers union ordered workers to walk off their jobs this morning to warn the coalition against slowing down Portugal's move to the left.

Violence in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Rival Christian and Moslem militias battled on the outskirts of Beirut today and snipers terrorized most of the embattled capital. A government spokesman said army troops would intervene in a limited, noncombatant role to help the undermanned internal security forces cope with the city-wide violence.

Postal Workers Lose Lawsuit

OTTAWA (CP) — A shoe manufacturing company located in Sherbrooke, Que., has been awarded $1,000 in damages to be paid by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers in a provincial court decision.

The award arises out of the 16-day illegal strike held by postal workers in April, 1974.

A spokesman for the national headquarters of the union said Tuesday that the union will have to look at the decision, the first won by businesses, to decide whether to appeal.

The firm is Santana Inc., a firm which sells shoes for women directly to retail stores, chain stores and to distributors located across the country.

The company uses postal services to send order requests to its customers, who then return the forms in the mail.

Santana said it had to borrow money from banks in order to continue operations and was forced to use more costly private courier, telephone and telegram services to stay in business.

In its submission to the Sherbrooke court, the company noted that its business volume dropped from $184,765 in March to $85,520 in April, the month of the national walkout. Its income rose to $162,918 in May.

The losses occurred directly because of the illegal action of the union, the company maintained.

BOAT MISHAP KILLS PAIR

A Vancouver man is in satisfactory condition but two of his companions are dead after a boating mishap on the mainland this morning.

In satisfactory condition at Vancouver General Hospital is Randy T. Buhr, 22. Dead are R. A. Klyne, 45, and his 16-year-old son Calvin Alexander.

The trio went fishing in a 14-foot aluminum boat Tuesday and were reported missing Tuesday evening.

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — British Columbia's legendary sasquatch is featured in an atlas recently published by the United States government.

The sasquatch is on Page 53 of the "Washington Environmental Atlas," a $48 publication of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

According to the text, illustrated with a drawing of a tall, hairy, ape-like creature, the FBI has investigated the monster, which has been sighted in Oregon, California, the Soviet Union and South America as well as B.C.

"Alleged sasquatch hair samples inspected by FBI laboratories resulted in the conclusion that no such hair exists on any human or presently-known animal for which such data are available," the Washington state atlas says.

But the FBI itself cannot recall such an investigation, says an official of the corp of engineers environmental resources division in Seattle, which supervised the book's preparation.

"The FBI called us today. 'Did we really do that?'" the official.

No trace has been found of such a lab report, the official added.

The reference was written by a Bob Maury, who has since left the corps' Seattle office. Attempts to locate him to check it out have been unsuccessful, the official said.

"It is part of the lore of the Pacific northwest which the people who worked on the atlas felt should be in," the official said of the sasquatch.

"A lot of conservationists felt some reference should be included. This is not a reflection of the corps' feeling, necessarily." The atlas notes that the sasquatch has been "sighted" 89 times in B.C. — more than anywhere else.

But California has the most reports of "sasquatch tracks" at 82, with B.C. second at 38.

"The very existence of sasquatch, or big foot as it is sometimes known, is hotly disputed," the atlas says. "Some profess to be open-minded about the matter, although stating that not one piece of evidence will withstand serious scientific scrutiny.

Others, because of a particular incident or totality of reports over the years, are convinced that sasquatch is a reality."

The book describes a composite picture, based on reports, of "an ape-like creature, standing between eight and 12 feet tall, weighing in excess of 1,000 pounds, and taking strides of up to six feet."

A map shows the location of U.S. sightings and tracks and a table compiles a total of 497 sasquatch reports.

"If sasquatch is purely legendary, the legend is likely to be a long time in dying," says the atlas. "On the other hand, if sasquatch does exist, then with the sasquatch hunts being mounted, and the increasing human population, it seems likely that some hard evidence may soon be in hand."

The atlas "which otherwise contains many scientific facts," an official said, can be purchased at U.S. government printing office bookstores.

The Seattle bookstore has had to order more copies after selling its first 100 atlases.

The atlas took three years to prepare and is described as being a comprehensive environmental inventory of Washingto state.
